The City of Wonders
A Village Built to Order
6 Black Bulls, 100 Beauties
Stars in Hollywood Sky

—By Arthur Brisbane—

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 12—There are too many things to be seen in this city of wonders. Consider a few incidents of the last 24 hours.

Dinner on the edge of the Pacific ocean in the house of the beautiful and talented Norma Shearer. In private life she is Mrs. Irving Thalberg, and they have tennis nets strung all around a swimming pool to keep the two-year-old boy from walking in.

Thalberg, everybody agrees, is the ablest super-director of them all. His task is to extract from plays and actors all their possibilities, a sort of intellectual mining engineer.

A visit to the Olympic village, where 1600 athletes of more than 30 nations live in a little city that Los Angeles built especially for them, and that H. O. Davis has equipped and runs for Los Angeles with great ability and perfect harmony.

The village of 500 small houses, each nationality having its separate group, kitchen and dining room, stands on a high hill that overlooks the Pacific on one side, the city of Los Angeles on the other.

A visit in the afternoon to Mary Pickford's studio.

On the way you meet her husband, Douglas Fairbanks, and Harold Lloyd, arm in arm. They say, "Come and look at Eddie Cantor, he is still working."

You turn toward Eddie Cantor, and Samuel Goldwyn, who appears, hurrying, says: "I will show you Eddie Cantor, he is making a picture for me."

Eddie Cantor is dressed in a bull fighter's costume, a big black belt around his waist. Temporarily he is in a prison cell with heavy iron bars, probably made of paper painted black. "I have been in better jails than this," says he, introducing you to Sidney Franklin, the American bull fighter, who left this country at the age of 18 to kill bulls in Spain, Mexico, everywhere.

"Show him the bulls, we got real ones," says Cantor. Franklin, the professional bull fighter, and Douglas Fairbanks, who practiced bull fighting to make a picture, lead the way to a corral where six black bulls shake their horns, paw the ground, acting as though they had lived all their lives in Hollywood, registering malevolence. Two long-horned brown American steers keep the bulls company, and, according to Bull Fighter Franklin, they prevent the bulls from fighting among themselves. Steers don't want to fight, can't see any sense in it, and separate the bulls when they start.

Learn from Mr. Franklin that a red rag means nothing to a bull. He cannot distinguish colors and will dash at any moving object, big or little. To be safe in his company the bull fighter stands still, while he moves to the left or right the banner that he holds in his hand. The bull sees the banner moving, follows it, and cannot turn around in time.

The matador's sword is plunged into the bull's spine just above the shoulders, not into the bull's heart. Douglas Fairbanks pointed out the spot with his finger on one black bull that appeared annoyed. The sword severs the spinal cord, paralyzing the bull, causing hemorrhage and death within 20 minutes. The impetus of the rushing bull, not the strength of the matador, buries the sword four feet in the animal's body. No bull is used twice. The second time he would know too much. He has a good memory.

In the picture Eddie Cantor, supposed never to have seen a bull in his life, is forced to become a bull fighter, after Sidney Franklin has shown him how the work is done. You see a few "shots" of Mr. Cantor's latest contribution of the Americas.

In addition to six Mexican black bulls and two brown steers there are 100 beautiful American girls, with eyes almost as big as Cantor's.

The ladies when you first meet them are "co-eds" in a great college. All are in bed, and all sleep in black lace nightgowns which would be no great protection in case of fire. They arise one after the other and all walk up a staircase to a swimming pool, thus showing the profile. After the bath they slide down a strange chute that might be used for firemen.

In the next scene, a school mistress, with eye-glasses, rebukes two young ladies that have overslept and compels each to say 50 times, "I am a naughty girl." The third that has slept too long is hard to awaken, but, once awake, it instantly begins saying "I am a naughty girl." This is not true, for it is Eddie Cantor, who has smuggled himself into the young ladies' dormitory.

The school mistress says, "Satan inspired you to drink

Hunt Girl in Pool War Killing

ROSE NEW LEGION CHIEF

BOTH PARTIES PLAN CHANGE IN DRY LAW

New Amendment Proposed Would Retain Government Control of Liquor

Washington, Aug. 13—A proposal to modify the Eighteenth Amendment today seemed likely of adoption at the December session of Congress, as both Republican and Democratic leaders declared President Hoover had approved their specific modification plans in his acceptance speech.

Rep. James M. Beck, Republican wet leader of the House, endorsed the President's modification views declaring they differed only in detail from the famous Beck-Linthicum resolution which the House almost adopted this summer.

Simultaneously, Senator Carter Glass (D) of Virginia, a converted modificationist, said the President had accepted his resolution, which the Senate defeated during the summer.

Glass chided the President for remaining silent so long on the prohibition issue.

"Had President Hoover sooner made known his views on repeal of the eighteenth amendment," said Glass, "the likelihood is that Congress would have adopted my resolution and would now be on the way to a solution of this perplexing problem."

NEW AMENDMENT PLANNED

There was a general sentiment on Capitol Hill that the President's proposal for prohibition reform would lead to submission of a new amendment next fall.

The new amendment, while repealing the Eighteenth Amendment, probably will retain in the federal government all control over interstate traffic in alcoholic liquors. It can scarcely go much further.

Senator McNary of Oregon, the assistant Republican leader, says the order of business when the Senate convenes is a vote on taking up prohibition repeal. The pending motion and proposal is one advanced by Senator Glass.

DEMOCRATS TO TAKE ACTION

In view of the Democratic platform declaration for outright repeal and immediate modification of the Volstead act, there seems little doubt also that the Democratic House will go into action in December on the 13-year-old national prohibition law.

Whether action can be compelled on such a controversial issue within the span of the three months' session is doubtful.

The contest will be how far to go in revising prohibition. Some members of both parties seek straight repeal. Others want to retain a vestige of federal supervision over the liquor traffic to insure protection of dry states and outlawry of the saloon.

H. Nelson Gay, 62, U. S. Author, Dies

Monte Carlo, Monaco, Aug. 13 (AP)—H. Nelson Gay, 62, American author, died today in the Monaco Hospital.

Mr. Gay was born in Newton, Mass., was educated at Amherst and Harvard, and in 1896 he was married in London to Eugenie Guthrie of New York. He was said to possess the best library in existence on the history of Italy between 1815 and 1870.

StocksDrop; Bear Sales Probed

New York, Aug. 13—Share prices finished a hectic week of trading on the New York Stock Exchange today at a level slightly below Friday's close. In a highly erratic short session leaders started the day at a lower level, than rallied only to break into fresh low territory for the day on new selling which entered the market in the final period.

Among issues closing about a point lower were General Motors, Du Pont, Ohio Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, and Union Allied Chemical, after selling off 5, closed 2 lower. Union Pacific after dropping 5½, rallied about 4 from the bottom.

TELEPHONE OFF 3

American Telephone sold off 3, then came back 2 from the bottom. U. S. Steel closed off a fraction, but the preferred was up a point.

Stone & Webster was up a major fraction, and other issues up slightly at the finish included American Smelting, Anaconda, Bethlehem and Procter & Gamble.

In commodities, wheat met support after an opening sag, and cotton converted early moderate losses into net gains of 55 to 75 cents a bale at the finish.

SHORT SELLING PROBED

Widespread interest was shown today in reports that the exchange was inquiring into the source of selling orders which flooded the stock market on Friday and early today.

Officials of the exchange had no comment to make, but it was learned that its officers were particularly eager to guard against the possibility of an outbreak of excessive short selling.

Suspect's Pants Taken; Faces Court

Police said they removed the pants for evidence after they found traces of an inflammable fluid.

Now they are wondering about Weltz' personal appearance in court.

GIRL LURE IN POOL KILLING IS HUNTED

Police Clue to Second Andover Murder Fails; Lottery Chiefs Move to End War

A girl who broke up his married life lured Frank "The Sheik" Darrigo, 28, of Hale st., West End, to his death in Andover at the hands of rival "nigger pool" operators, police believed today as they started a search for the girl in Lawrence, Andover, and Boston.

Police, acting on a tip that a second body might be in the woods, searched the area today but found no trace of another victim.

In the way of Mrs. Darrigo's body, with a crimson handkerchief in the breast pocket of his coat, was found in a clearing beside a lonely road in Andover just as 19 of the 24 men who were released in municipal court following a raid at a downtown hotel, were holding another "pool" meeting.

WOULD STOP MURDERS

This meeting—the first was interrupted by the hotel raid 10 days ago—was for the purpose of forming an organization and coming to an agreement among the pool operators which would eliminate just such slayings as that of Darrigo and Charles Casteione, who was

MRS. PRINCE IS HURT ON YACHT

Mrs. Frederick H. Prince, wife of the Boston banker, was rendered unconscious today and suffered an injured nose and lips when she fell aboard the Prince yacht Lone Star in Newport (R. I.) harbor.

Sailors carried her into the cabin, where she was attended by Drs. Henry Hennings Knapp and Philip Tartaglino of Newport, but failed to revive immediately.

The banker then communicated with Dr. Fred W. Johnson of 167 Newbury st., Back Bay, personal physician, and asked him to fly to Newport and attend Mrs. Prince. The banker also requested that Thomas Carroll of the Prince staff at Beverly be flown to Newport.

Germany Bans Nudists and Beauty Contests

Berlin, Aug. 13 (INS)—The cult of nudism in Germany, birthplace of a movement which in the last year has spread throughout the world, was doomed to extinction in Prussia today, with indications that the government's war on nakedness would eventually be carried throughout the country.

The blow was dealt by Franz Bracht, federal commissioner for Prussia, who in an order abolished the nudist colonies which have sprung up like mushrooms all over the state.

Magazines published by the societies, with an aggregate circulation of more than 1,000,000 a month, will be forced to eliminate all nude photographs.

Participation of German girls in international beauty contests will be rigorously prohibited.

Bracht's order even reached into theaters and cabarets. He forbids chorus girls to prance in bathing suits or lingerie. Billboard advertisements showing women in scanty attire are prohibited.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (INS)—The modesty of the Olympic games was shocked again today. Dr. Leo Donath of Hungary, president of the International Federation of Nation Athletes, halted the men's high diving championship and sent Carlos Curiel and Jesus Albo, both of Mexico, to the dressing rooms to change.

Dr. Donath objected to the "too generous arm cut" of the Mexican suits. Curiel and Albo then borrowed proper suits from life guards.

VETS DEMAND BEER AND BONUS

'Inhuman Treatment' of B.E.F. and Action of Red Cross Condemned by Soldiers

Lawrence, Aug. 13—With a cheering reception to its newly elected officers, Massachusetts Department, American Legion, closed its three-day convention here today with a colorful parade that was viewed by more than 200,000 persons.

James P. Rose of Yankee Division Post, Boston, elected commander after the final business session, declared for beer and the bonus, was the owner of attractions at the parade owning through the business session.

More than 25,000 legionnaires were in line, marching to the lilting tunes of 150 bands and followed by scores of floats.

Rose, a veteran both the Spanish and World Wars, defeated Frank H. Foy, Quincy business man. A few years ago he was retired from the Boston fire department because of injuries and last May was awarded the purple heart for injuries he received while serving as a first lieutenant with the Yankee Division in France.

Jeremiah J. Twomey, commanders of Lawrence Post and official host to the convention, was chosen one of five vice-commanders. The others were James E. Cnway of Winthrop, Daniel J. Doherty of Woburn, Jeremiah J. Leahy of Plymouth and Theodore B. Quinlan of Springfield.

Adjut. Harold P. Redden, who was stricken with appendicitis last night, was re-elected to his post.

The others elected were James V. Crowley of Cambridge, treasurer; Dr. Claude Fuess of Andover, historian; Rev. H. Robert Smith of Malden, chaplain; Miss Helen A. Murray of Boston, executive committee.

DELEGATES PICKED

The four delegates elected for the national convention at Portland, Ore., next year were Georga W. Gardner of Boston, John J. Harrington of Waltham, Mary A. McDonald of Cambridge and John J. Walsh of Lowell.

The resolutions for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, modification of the Volstead Act and immediate cash payment of adjusted compensation were vociferously approved by the delegates.

A resolution that condemned the American Red Cross for failure to aid the bonus army precipitated a stirring debate that was halted by the suggestion of Commander Garrity for return to the resolutions committe for reframing.

WALKER GAINS IN FIGHT TO PREVENT HIS REMOVAL

COURT BLOCKS EARLY ACTION BY ROOSEVELT

New York Mayor Declared to Have Refuted Seabury's Principal Charges

Albany, Aug. 13 (INS)—Mayor Walker's never-say-die battle to prevent Samuel Seabury, or anybody else, from removing him as chief magistrate of the greatest city in the country, seemed decidedly nearer success today than when the public hearing began last Thursday before Gov. Roosevelt.

The prospect of Roosevelt acting quickly on the removal charges is now remote because of the order issued by Supreme Court Justice Harold J. Hinman, which blocks a decision until August 19, when the governor's authority to remove the mayor will be argued in court.

Indications are that if the court then upholds the governor's contention that he has jurisdiction in the Walker case other court battles will follow, delaying any decision until after the presidential election. The dispute might be carried to the United States Supreme Court.

MAY AID ROOSEVELT.

Politically, Gov. Roosevelt is the beneficiary of the present status of the battle, because if he is prevented from acting on the delicate question of removal of the mayor until after election he will avoid incurring the enmity of Mayor Walker's friends in New York State and throughout the country.

At the same time the governor cannot be accused of dodging the issue of clashing with Tammany Hall by failing to act in the case of one of its idols.

There was no session today, the Governor having adjourned the proceedings until Monday afternoon when Mayor Walker will resume the stand for further questioning concerning the charges brought by Seabury, chief counsel of the Hofstadter legislative inquiry.

On Monday the Governor will

Walker Heartened by Rosy Greeting

New York, Aug. 13 (INS)—Refreshed by a sound night's sleep, Mayor Walker prepared to go today to the Larchmont home of his friend, A. C. Blumenthal, real estate and theatrical magnate, for the week-end rest.

After two days of questioning in Albany by Gov. Roosevelt, Walker was heartened by a tumultuous welcome when he arrived by train last night.

Pretty maidens carrying baskets of roses strewed the flowers before him in the station as a crowd of 5000 cheered.

An elderly woman broke through police lines and throwing her arms about the mayor's neck planted a kiss on his cheek.

HUNT GIRL IN KILLING

killed in the West End several weeks ago.

Following an autopsy today at Andover Medical Examiner Victor A. Reed and his assistant, Dr. George B. Sargent, said they had reached the conclusion that Darrigo was murdered—probably by being shot. There were marks on shoulder bones such as are made by bullets. No bullet was found in the body.

Darrigo, it was learned by Inspectors John A. Dorsey and Timothy Donovan, has been estranged from his wife for six months—his home broken up by a girl.

Believing that the slain man was led to his death by this girl, detectives were attempting today to find the estranged wife, who lives on Hanover st., in the hope of learning from her the girl's identity.

Police, in investigating the amours of Darrigo which won him his title as "The Sheik," learned that a short time ago a romance between Darrigo and a comely North End girl was broken up by her sister, because, according to the sister, Darrigo was "too smart," and she was suspicious of him.

Darrigo was linked today by his father, the identifier, as a cousin of Castelone, the murdered nigger pool operator.

Officers revealed they were satisfied the shotgun slaying of Castelone in the West End several weeks ago resulted from Castelone's refusal to pay.

Darrigo's father, Pietro Darrigo, talked readily when taken to headquarters. He admitted his son was the victim of a gangster and said he was "true blue" to him.

He said his son had been missing since Sunday, July 31. He drove away with friends whom the father did not know.

The father told police he had not reported him as missing and had not been worried because the youth frequently took trips to Detroit and Chicago, and was absent for a week or two.

As a result of the questioning of the father and further checking in the West End, police learned that a few days after the Castelone slaying two Detroit men came here as a result of telephone calls to that city from a suburban exchange here on the night of the slaying.

The pair remained here until about three days before the seizure of 26 men, all alleged pool operators, in a downtown hotel a few weeks ago. They then disappeared as mysteriously as they arrived.

Regarding the telephone calls police learned that four were made to Detroit and five to Chicago. All nine calls were made between two and three hours after Castelone was slain. Police learned that one of the calls to Chicago ordered a floral shipment to Boston held up.

BLOCK CONSPIRACY MOVE.

The meeting of pool operators, which was broken up ten days ago by the surprise police raid, was held yesterday at a downtown office building, with only five men missing out of the 24 who were released in court because there was no evidence to convict them.

Two of the leaders circulated among those present and outlined to them the aims and purposes of the new organization, designed to prevent wars among them, with resultant murders.

The "men to man" explanations were made by the leaders in order to avert any claim of police, in the event of another surprise raid, that there was a conspiracy, as police could claim if one leader made an address and the others openly agreed.

The conferees were told that the pool racket had reached a point where, if the operators themselves did not agree and settle their disputes without publicity, the police would have an opportunity to wreck the game.

Even while this was being declared, D'Arrigo's body was being found in the Andover-Reading byPath and the very purpose of the meeting was being defeated, temporarily.

2 SLAYINGS AVERTED

According to persons on the "inside," even the police know that two other slayings were averted last May after three of the kingpins of the nigger pool racket had carried on a concerted drive to steal agents and small numberwriters from districts in which they wished to gain footholds.

Police also know, it is declared, that there have been at least five minor cutting cases in the past year in nigger pool rooms, but the authorities have never been able to get any evidence.

At yesterday's meeting the conferees were told the inability of "certain public officials" to prevent harassing of the pool operators would result in these "public officials" being cut off the payrolls and "sent back to work."

TRAIL OF BLOOD LEADS TO CELL

Police who followed a trail of blood from the wreck of a stolen car in Charlestown today arrested Daniel Houghton, 18, of Cottage st., Charlestown, in the emergency room of the Haymarket Relief Station.

The car, property of Harry A. Russell and stolen from a Stuart st. parking space, crashed into a light pole in Cottage st. Patrolmen Byrne and Gillant found it abandoned and followed blood stains into Houghton's house where his mother said he had gone to the Relief Hospital. He was being treated for a severe laceration of one hand and was arrested on a charge of motor vehicle larceny.

LAWYER FINED IN VICE CASE

George L. Wilson, Framingham attorney, was found guilty today by Judge Adlow in Municipal court of deriving support from a woman, and was fined $500.

Miss Jean Brent, arrested on June 18 at a Tremont st. hotel, told the court that while she paid $10 a week in a South End hotel conducted by Wilson, he called her several times and sent her to rooms where there were guests.

She said a bellboy called at her room several times "for the money for Mr. Wilson."

Wilson hotly denied the charges, and appealed. He was held for Superior Court.

Judge Adlow asked Miss Brent if she had any motive for proceeding against Wilson, and she replied that her only motive was a desire to "go straight." She was placed on probation on an idle and disorderly charge.

GARNER CLAIMS PARTY VICTORY BY 10 MILLION

Speaker on Way to Conference With Roosevelt Predicts November Landslide

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 13 (INS)—John N Garner, speaker of the House and Democratic vice-presidential nominee, predicted a sweeping Democratic victory at the polls when his train stopped here briefly today.

The Democratic party nominees will win by a majority of 10,000,000 votes, Garner said.

Speaker Garner is on his way to Hyde Park, N. Y., for his first conference with his running mate, Gov. Roosevelt tomorrow.

Roosevelt, according to reports would like to have Garner accompany him on one of his trips during the latter part of the campaign.

Speaker Garner was to have been a guest at the executive mansion in Albany on Monday but because of the Walker "trial" the governor decided the conference would have to be held at his country home a day ahead of schedule.

Roosevelt and Garner are expected to devote a considerable part of their conference to discussing Governor's acceptance speech. It has been intimated that Garner, in his campaign tour, will have "plenty" to say about the President's stand on prohibition and foreign debts.

If present plans materialize it is expected that Garner will make several campaign speeches in the Middle West on agriculture. Roosevelt, himself, is planning to devote at least two of his major speeches to the problems of the farmer.

Woollen Confers With Farley on Finances

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—Evans Woollen, chairman of the finance committee of the Roosevelt-Garner campaign, was in New York from his home in Indianapolis today to confer with Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley and other leaders.

With the aid of Farley, Frank C. Walker, treasurer of the national committee, and Forbes Morgan, executive secretary of the finance committee, Woollen will complete the reorganization of the organization and will then go to Albany to see Gov. Roosevelt.

Raising of campaign funds will be done through an executive committee of the finance committee, headed by Governor Cloy, Harry F. Byrd of Virginia.

HITLER BARRED FROM SEAT OF CHANCELLOR

Von Hindenburg Announces Von Papen Will Continue at the Helm

Berlin, Aug. 13 (INS)—Adolf Hitler's determined fight to be named chancellor of Germany ended in failure today.

After a 35-minute conference with the Nazi leader President Von Hindenburg announced Lieut.-Col. Franz Von Papen would remain at the helm of the German ship of state.

Von Hindenburg has asked Hitler to participate in a coalition cabinet in some post other than the chancellorship.

HITLER KEEPS PROMISE

Hitler, true to promises to his followers, demanded full executive power.

"My conscience and my duty to the Fatherland," the octogenarian President said, "prevents me from shouldering such responsibility."

During the conference, thousands of Hitler's brown-shirted storm troops were concentrated in fields and meadows, about Berlin, reported ready to march on the capital and seize the government if their leader was refused the chancellorship.

CIVIL WAR THREAT

Maj. Hans von Arnim, chief-of-staff of the 400,000 "storm troops," issued a virtual declaration of war.

"If the Nazis cannot get power legally," he said, "we shall not be afraid to seize it by illegal means."

BEER AND BONUS LEGION'S CRY

mittee the condemnation was restricted to units of Johnstown, Pa., and not the organization as a whole. The measure was defeated, however.

Curtailment of benefits to war veterans, subject of a two-hour session with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd of the National Economy League before the resolutions committee, were shouted down by the delegates.

The convention condemned the "inhuman treatment" of the Bonus Expeditionary Force in Washington and expressed "unalterable opposition" to cancellation of war debts.

Another resolution recorded the sympathy of the convention for the family of Congressman Edward H. Eslyk of Tennessee, who died in Congress while delivering a speech for the "bonus."

The last was at the suggestion of Congressman John W. McCormack of Boston.

Other resolutions included a boom for State Chaplain Rev. Robert J. White of Watertown for national chaplain; funds for tuberculosis wards at Northampton Hospital, and a survey of the homestead plans for veterans.

The convention was halted for a time for a radio broadcast and introduction of national officials. The latter included Col. Frederick H. Payne, assistant secretary of war; Congressman A. Piatt Andrew of Gloucester, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Miss Emma Lovejoy of Melrose, state president of the ladies' auxiliary; Wendell D. Crowley and John Rooney, state commanders of New Hampshire and Maine, respectively.

150 BANDS COMPETE

As the delegates conducted the final business and cast their ballots for state leaders, more than 150 fife, drum and bugle corps were in competition at Memorial Park.

Long before the start of the parade, crowds gathered for vantage points along the route.

Traffic was diverted from the route early in the day and in the side streets near the start, where the various units formed to take their places in the line of march.

The lure of "retreat" as the closing ceremony on Lawrence Common, drew most of the crowd to that area. Others secured seats in office buildings and other points in the business section.

APPLAUSE FOR GIRLS' POST

The members of Bessie Edwards Post, the only girl members officially allowed the Legion uniform, were received with great applause.

The bands and other musical units that competed earlier in the day were well sprinkled through the line of march and accounted for practically no letup on music in any section of the parade. Among the floats entered, the exhibit of All Nurses Post, depicting the work of the nurses during the war, was received with acclaim all along the line.

Rhode Island Legion Demands Full Bonus

West Warick, R. I., Aug. 13 (INS)—Resolutions favoring full payment of the soldiers' bonus and immediate repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment together with an investigation of the National Economy League had been adopted today by the Rhode Island department of the American Legion. Sharp debate centered around the bonus resolution.

LIGHTS REVEAL YOUTH'S BODY

The body of Orestes Stephannine, 30, sought since Monday in a West Quincy quarry, was recovered today in 80 feet of water about 50 feet from where he plunged to his death.

Strong water lights were used to locate the body after dragging and a search by David Carney, deep sea diver.

Stephannine, who lived in Graftan, Quincy Point, was drowned Monday when he dived into another swimmer in trying to avoid a dog.

ENGLISH READY TO FLEE ERIN

London, Aug. 13 (INS)—English traders people in Dublin have arranged for their wives and families to leave the country at a moments' notice in the event anti-British violence breaks out in connection with the Anglo-Irish trade war, according to the Dublin correspondent of the Daily Sketch today.

The correspondent asserted that Lloyds had accepted a "colossal amount" of property insurance from British firms in Ireland. The risk of "looting and civil disturbance" was quoted in the policies.

Meanwhile President De Valera, according to the Daily Herald, is reported ready to begin an anti-British trade campaign in the United States through the medium of the Irish race conference in New York, opening tomorrow.

DENTIST SLAIN IN GIRL GARB

Denver, Col., Aug. 13 (AP)—The weird death of Dr. Hugh Powell, 33, whose body was found hanging from a dental chair in his office, puzzled authorities today.

The body, clad only in a pair of woman's black silk stockings and a pair of women's shoes, was found last night by his wife.

A towel was tied to the head rest of the chair and suspended the body by the chin. Police said if it was suicide, it was the strangest case of self-destruction in the annuals of the Denver police department.

Wound about each leg of the dead man was a rope clothesline, police stated. It seemed, after some sort of pattern.

UNABLE TO POST BAIL FOR HEARING

Behind the gaunt brick and granite walls of Charles st. jail, murderers await their day of judgment and their doom.

In the stone cages with the steel bar facings, highwaymen and burglars and dope fiends pace the short walk, yammering sometimes, groaning always—awaiting the convenience of the courts and the justice of the courts.

A girl waits there too. A homeless girl known on the police records as Dorothy Adams, 22, of Portland, Me.

Behind the walls with the murderers and the highwaymen and the burglars and the dope fiends, "Dorothy Adams" waited today.

She didn't kill anybody.

She didn't put a gun under anybody's nose and demand the day's receipts.

HER "HEINOUS CRIME"

She didn't take an illegal cut on a construction contract or make any unsecured loans that resulted in a bank failure.

She stole a roll of adhesive tape. That is the only charge against her and she has waited 10 days for the court to dispose of it and she faces another 10 days in jail before it is disposed of.

As crimes go, hers wasn't a very big one.

Her feet ached and she wanted to bind them up and she stole a roll of adhesive tape.

There were 10 yards of tape in the roll. It was valued at retail at the store from which she stole it, at one cent a yard.

When they caught her, she offered to pay the dime but wasn't allowed to do so.

STAR CHAMBER STUFF

She was sent to the House of Good Shepherd for 10 days while an investigation was conducted to learn who she really was.

Yesterday she was taken into a star chamber session of court before Judge Charles L. Carr. Apparently the probation authorities weren't satisfied with their investigation over a 10-day period. Judge Carr decided another 10 days were necessary before the case could be disposed of.

Dorothy Adams was asked not to be sent back to the House of Good Shepherd.

So Judge Carr set bail at $1000

And She Already Owns Whole Building, But She Does Set Stockholm Styles

By STEN HEDMAN

Copyright, 1932, by International News Service.

Stockholm, Aug. 13 (INS)—Even in her home life, Greta Garbo remains the enemy of tradition.

From time immemorial, legend has dictated a set course of action for persons who have left poverty and obscurity in Europe, amassed fame and fortune in the United States, and then returned.

Either they go back, amid tears, to some thatched-roof cottage where they were born or are ushered in with pomp to the baronial hall of a mansion built or bought with the dollars earned in the land of opportunity.

But Garbo's return, in keeping with everything else she does, was different.

BUYS OUT OLD HOME

No thatched-roof cottage with ivy 'round the door greeted her. Nor did flunkies and footmen wait hand and foot on the former barber-shop soap girl who became one of the world's leading actresses.

She found her home hearth in a two-room flat in the southern quarter of the city, a section inhabited by the better class of artisans.

Sentimental comparisons might be made between this tiny abode and a rose-covered cottage. Save for one thing. That is that Garbo owns the whole block of apartments in which the flat is located.

One of the chief reasons for Garbo's visit to Stockholm was to visit the young bride of her brother, Sven Gustafson. The young couple live in Greta's apart-

Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP)—Walter Smith, youngest son of former Governor Alfred E. Smith, was married here today to Miss Florence E. Watson of Schenectady.

Miss Watson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Watson of Schenectady. Young Smith, who was graduated by Manhattan University this year, met her when she was a stenographer in the education department at Albany. Smith was recorded at the license clerk's office as assistant secretary of the New York County Trust Company.

The bride wore a gown of white lorienne lace over white satin, with a Juliette cape. Her bridesmaid was Miss Margaret Cramer of Watervliet, and Smith's attendant was William Hess, a brother-in-law.

GUARDSMEN GAS COAL PICKETS

Athens, O., Aug. 13 (INS)—Close on the heels of a night of disturbances marked by frequent gun battles between Ohio National Guardsmen and snipers, a new disorder broke out at the Lick Run Mine of the New York Coal Company today when militiamen beat back a crowd of pickets with tear gas.

Meanwhile, official sources denied reports the guardsmen had been ordered "to shoot to kill."

The trouble at the Lik Run Mine broke out as shifts were being changed. A crowd of alleged union pickets attempted to attack the working miners. Guardsmen beat them back by a generous use of tear gas bombs.

Throughout the night, troopers engaged in exchange of shots with snipers a half mile from the Mine No. 25 of the Manhattan Coal Company at Cheuney.

HOOVER IS DONE WITH TALK ON PROHIBITION

Washington, Aug. 13 (INS)—Having "said his say" on the thorny subject of prohibition, President Hoover plans to ignore it as an issue for the balance of the campaign, according to present plans.

He will make no fervent appeal to the country to accept his saloonless substitute for the Eighteenth Amendment. If the Democrats want to talk about prohibition, well and good, but so far as Mr. Hoover personally is concerned he has closed the prohibition book until after the election.

He has armed his followers and Republican orators generally with ammunition with which to reply to Democratic attacks on the subject of prohibition. They can use it or not as they see fit.

Taking their cue from Mr. Hoover's speech of acceptance, the Republicans on the stump will present his plan as "constructive" as opposed to the "destructive" plan of outright repeal advanced by Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Democratic platform.

As for Mr. Hoover himself in the few speeches he plans to make during the campaign he will concentrate almost exclusively on economic issues.

SEEKS MIDDLE STAND

President Hoover's political strategy places him between the fanatical drys and the dripping wets. He believes the majority of the American voters will favor the same middle ground wit himm.

Representative James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, most prominent constitutionalist in the "wet bloc" in Congress, declared the Hoover proposal for a substitute amendment for the Eighteenth Amendment embodied a "reasonable recognition of the basic principle of local self-government," and one

"Upon which both wets and drys should unite to the common end of solving this problem and removing it as an obstruction to the path of progress."

The organized drys were in a quandary. Hoover was their peerless leader in 1928. Today, the usually voluble spokesmen of the prohibition extremists ran to cover.

STATEMENT HELD UP

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, chairman of the allied forces fighting repeal got word he would issue a statement here later "on the Hoover candidacy" after his committee has been polled.

The militant wets were in much the same confused state. The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which declared for outright repeal, announced at headquarters here its statement would be forthcoming until a meeting of the executive committee. The Crusaders defer action until after a session in Cleveland.

These developments encouraged the White House to believe Hoover had achieved his majority purpose. Intimates were sure that by explaining the extreme wets on both sides of the question, he would please the great body of voters who stand on the middle ground.

Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, has argued that in the Hoover inner-circle of councilors, he was convinced that if the fanatical drys and the dripping wets found fault with the Hoover position, the average American voter would conclude that there must be considerable merit in it.

The White House believed also that Representative Beck had indicated clearly that the Republican wets would be Republicans first and wets thereafter in the presidential campaign.

UPROLLS PLATFORM

Efforts to have it appear that Hoover had junked the Chicago prohibition plank found no substantiation.

Although the President stated specifically there must be no "change," point was made of the fact the Chicago "straddle" plank proposed no change and the President clarified and amplified. It was asserted vigorously that he stood squarely on the Chicago plank, had made it his own and had tried merely to remove the idea it is a straddle, which neither wets nor drys could comprehend.

MAN NOT GUILTY MUST SERVE PRISON TERM

The plight of a man freed of guilt in a crime but under compulsion to serve three to five years in prison because of the crime he did not commit, was presented today in superior court—with Frank Ferrara, alias Frank Foster, 28, of Cambridge, as the victim.

On February 2, Ferrara was found guilty on two counts of forging and uttering and two counts of larceny, and on February 8 he was sentenced to three to five years in State Prison.

PROBATION REVOKED

Because of the charge, he had also been surrendered by the probation officer on an old suspended sentence of three to five years and his probation was revoked and the old sentence was imposed—to be served after the other.

Declaring that he was innocent, his wife went to Mrs. Glendower Evans of Brookline and interested her in the case. Mrs. Evans financed an investigation, securing from a New York hotel clerk an affidavit that Ferrera was in New York on the day the crime was committed in Boston and another affidavit that Ferrera, using the name Foster, had signed a telegraph money order in New York.

Ferrera was granted a new trial and a handwriting expert testified that the signature "Foster" was made by Ferrara, according to specimens of his handwriting.

FOUND NOT GUILTY

Today, Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall, in jury waived session, found Ferrara not guilty, and he therefore was cleared of the new three to five-year sentence. However, the court is powerless to revoke the old three to five-year sentence imposed on the voided probation.

Atty. Reuben L. Lurie, counsel for Ferrara, announced that he will seek a pardon for Ferrara from the governor and council, and Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank Hickey, who prosecuted the case, will make no objection.

7 SAVED AS SEA RACERS UPSET

Marblehead, Aug. 13—Complications arose today over the action of judges leaving the finish line and going to the aid of distressed craft as a squall struck Marblehead harbor during the second day of the Corinthian Yacht Club races yesterday.

Winners planned to protest having the races run over.

Frank P. Munro, chairman of the race committee, who ordered the judges' boat to aid the distressed craft, declared the possibility lives might be lost seemed more important than the judges remaining at the finish line.

In yesterday's sudden storm the committee aided in the rescue of five men and two girls as one boat sank, and two others capsized, and more than 50 small craft were taken in tow.

Wanderer VII, owned by the Griffin Brothers of Cottage Park, was almost split in half and sank in 20 fathoms of water when the gale struck. Skipper Edward Griffin, Jack Wheeler and Bud Nugent, her crew, were rescued by Louis Rawding's power launch, Dorothea.

Patrolman Howard McGee, in the police patrol boat, rescued Helen Francis, 12, of Marblehead Neck and Betty Breed of Ocean ave., when their sailboat capsized, claimed today.

MORE MEN ON HOLDUP PATROL

All officers who could be spared from other duty were assigned today to the "holdup patrol," with which police will combat an expected continuance of banditry.

Close watch was established in the downtown district on all small retail stores of the types which have been the special victims of recent holdups.

A recurrence of robberies as brazen as those of the last few days will result in a drastic shakeup of the entire police department, it was reported.

All the holdups were in daylight and with crowds around. The "fixed post" system of doing duty in the downtown division was blamed by some officials for the ease with which the robberies were committed.

Cardinal O'Connell was attended by Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine of Brookline and Rt. Rev. Richard J. Nagle of Malden.

The solemn high mass of requiem at 10 o'clock was preceded by a children's mass that hour earlier.

PRIESTS IN CEREMONY

Rev. Joseph F. Coppinger, formerly of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, successor to Bishop Peterson as pastor of St. Catherine of Genoa Church, Somerville, was celebrant of the requiem mass.

He was assisted by the Rev. Francis P. Foley, deacon, and the Rev. John J. Quinlan, sub-deacon, both of St. Joseph's Church.

The Rev. Harty M. O'Connor of Cathedral of the Holy Cross was master of ceremonies; the Rev. Henry M. Tallen of Sacred Heart Church, Malden, thurifer, and the Rev. Neil J. Hurley of St. Joseph's Church, Lynn, and the Rev. Matthew C. Dugan of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, acolytes.

HUNDREDS LINE STREETS

Police Chief Thomas Danery and Fire Chief Joseph Lothrop, each with a detail of 18 men, escorted Mayor Murphy, the board of aldermen and the heads of the city departments.

Hundreds, unable to obtain seats at the mass, stood with bared heads outside the church and more hundreds stood in respect as the cortege passed from Union sq. to Bow st., to Summer to Elm to Davis sq., to Holland st. to Teele st. to Broadway and there to Mt. Paul's Cemetery, Arlington.

Active pallbearers were Dr. Michael W. White, Michael J. O'Connor, William T. Crotty, Francis B. Smith, Joseph A. Haley and Atty. Frederick J. White.

GIRL WANDERER WAITS JUSTICE

She is doomed to stay in jail for nine more days unless someone comes forward to put up $1000 bail on a 10-cent larceny charge.

There is only one charge against her but she was told other charges might be made and she might go to state prison unless she revealed her real identity. Her apparent refinement, her claim to a college education and a hiking trip in search of adventure baffled the authorities.

WHISPER A NAME

Under the pressure of the prison threat, "Dorothy Adams" whispered another name and address to the officials.

What it was they declined to say, or whether an investigation dented it to be the correct one.

Whatever the case, the girl is in jail without any adhesive tape but with one more day to go before the 10-cent larceny charge comes up in court again.

The girl, dressed in masculine attire, was arrested in a downtown hotel on Aug. 2 by Mary Flynn, store detective. After a night in the house of detention and examination by the probation authorities, she faced Judge Carr.

She had worked her way through college she said, and hit the highroad in search of adventure. Her mother, she said was a housekeeper in a good family. Her father, she said, was dead.

DOUBT IF SHE'S 22

The only parts of her story doubted by the probation authorities were those regarding her age and her graduation from college. She appears younger than 22.

That she had attended college, they didn't doubt, because she knew more about psychology during an examination than most of the probation officers. But they doubted she had been graduated.

Judge Carr asked her reason for not giving her real identity and she said she did not wish to hurt her mother.

The probation office reported her to be a girl of excellent moral character, but she wouldn't tell her name.

BLIND STUDENT, DOG HONORED

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—W. R. Duckett of Franklin, Neb., received his master's degree in history at Columbia University yesterday and a dog was given a medal today for making it possible for him to get it. Duckett is blind.

The dog, a collie named Scottie, was bought by Mr. and Mrs. Duckett for $10 in a Kansas City pound six years ago.

For the last three years Scottie has led Duckett from class to class during the summer session. The medal was presented by the Allied Dog Lovers' Society for devotion and heroism.

FOLLIES BEAUTY IN STABBING

Margery Whittington, former Follies dancer, who once valued her legs at $1,000,000 in a suit for auto injuries, was arrested today with her brother, Lawrence, at a camp on Lake Archer, Wrentham, where a man was found stabbed.

Called to the camp by summer residents who heard sounds of fighting, police reported finding James Gillis, 30, under a table and bleeding profusely.

He had been stabbed in the back with an ice-pick, according to the police, but pending further investigation the arrested pair were charged only with disturbing the peace and drunkenness.

Gillis was taken to Norwood Hospital and the others to Framingham district court where they were held in $500 bail each and removed to Dedham jail, to await a hearing later.

All three live in New York, and the Whittingtons gave their address as 4511 South 158th st., Flushing, L. I.

Miss Whittington told police she was in the Ziegfeld Follies several years ago and when asked if she was the dancer who put up the $1,000,000 valuation on her legs thereby attracting national notoriety, she said she was.

BAMBERG WINS 40 'N' 8 HONOR

MARTIAL LAW RULES CHILE

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 13 (AP)—Martial law was proclaimed throughout Chile today after police and soldiers had put down a short-lived rebellion against the government by 400 students of the University of Chile.

A police officer, a student and a boy bystander were killed in a battle last night and there were unconfirmed reports that five other persons were dead. Twenty were wounded.

The students seized the university buildings, demanding the restoration of Col. Marmaduke Grove as head of the government instead of Carlos Davila. Grove was a colleague of Senor Davila in the first Socialist revolution several weeks ago, but was ousted by a

HIT-RUN DRIVER KILLS AGED MAN

Hyannis, Aug. 13—Dominic Samos, 67, gardener on the Yarmouthport estate of Thomas C. Thacher of Boston, was killed by a hit-and-run motorist on the State highway here early today.

His body was dragged into the bushes for a considerable distance and found there shortly after daybreak. Police found tire marks of the hit-and-run machine, which was apparently an eastbound truck.

The car went 84 feet after the brakes were applied and nearly turned around. All garages on the Cape are being checked in search of a car with a broken headlight, as glass was found in the roadway.

Held for $44 Tax, Man Dies in Jail

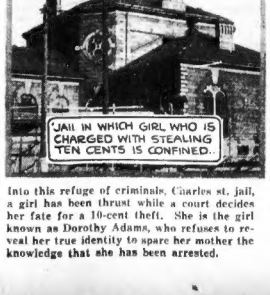
PRACTICAL STUDY IN CURING CRIME



JAIL IN WHICH GIRL WHO IS CHARGED WITH STEALING TEN CENTS IS CONFINED.

JAIL IN WHICH BANK WRECKERS AND MILLION DOLLAR STOCK SWINDLERS ARE HELD.

Into this refuge of criminals, Charles st. jail, a girl has been thrust while a court decides her fate for a 10-cent theft. She is the girl known as Dorothy Adams, who refuses to reveal her true identity to spare her mother the knowledge that she has been arrested.

The above is an excellent likeness of the place in which society restrains many of its criminals who believe in doing things in a big way. But for a 10-cent theft, which caused no hardship or suffering, justice saw fit to put Dorothy Adams behind bars.

TAXI MAN BEATS AND ROBS FARE

The victim, Charles McCann, 72, of Hampshire st., Roxbury, on regaining consciousness, staggered into a garage on Elm st., Dedham, in a dazed condition.

Police took him to the emergency hospital, where six stitches were taken in the scalp wound.

State Patrolman Walter Burke later took McCann from the hospital to Fall River to try to identify the cab driver.

3 Seized in Try to Rob Town Official

Charged with trying to steal the billfold of a Norwood selectman at a carnival last night, Harry Heffman, Callender st., Dorchester, was held in $2000 today in Dedham court for hearing August 24.

William Stanley, Dwight st., South End, and Frank Harris of Walpole, arrested at the same place as vagrants were held in $1000 each. Hoffman allegedly was caught robbing Selectman Peter Feeney.

SOMETIMES A YOUNG GIRL COMES BACK TO HER home city for her debut . . . even as far away as Europe they have come to be presented among their school and playmates . . .

ROSE WHITMAN

This will be the case of Mary Weld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Weld of Riverdale-on-Hudson, New York.

The Welds used to live in Dedham before the slump in the COTTON WORLD slump . . . They moved to New York, coming back during the summer to their place at Wareham on the Cape.

Mary attended Miss Winsor's school when they were in Boston, of course. She was popular, charming and full of nice little naughty ways . . . like all of the Welds . . . Uncle Rudolph, for instance, who has all of his PET stories written on his cuffs so he won't forget the point after the long dinners are over . . . and he is feeling very, very merry.

* * *

Mary's cousins are Mrs. William Elkins (Eloise Weld) of Philadelphia and Mrs. Albert Bigelow (Sylvia Weld) who is now in Munich, Germany. They will no doubt entertain for the pretty new debutante.

Many Entertainments for Future Deb

KATHERINE LAPHAM SALTONSTALL WHOSE RECENT divorce from Philip, Jr., was not unexpected, is Mary's aunt and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, the former Frances Saltonstall, and the various branches of Saltonstalls are all relations of Miss Mary's on her mother's side. What a lot of balls, teas and parties this may mean for the future "bud" . . . !

* * *

Grandmother Philip Saltonstall had to give up her enchanting house on Beacon st., next to the Somerset Club during a depression in the family . . . she is a rare mother and grandmother . . . her friends call her "adorable." She will see that little Mary has a party, no doubt.

North Shore Bud

FROM THE NORTH SHORE will come Rose Whitman, pretty daughter of the Hendricks H. Whitmans . . . mother one of Chicago's important families, the Chatfield-Taylors.

SO FAR, MRS. WHITMAN has outshone her older members of her family in the news . . . she writes plays and occasionally gets one produced . . . and ladies' cocktails. Several of the Vincent Club shows were enlivened with her talent, both as writer and actress . . .

A SHORT TIME AGO SHE went to Paris . . . and some say she came back with 17 in her pocketbook . . . but has not decided to have 17 o.k.d. by Henry. People say that if she would live more and romance less her plays would be more interesting.

Theater Party?

MRS. FRANKLIN HOBBS IS Rose's aunt which makes Rebekah her first cousin . . . a chance for a cozy little theater party for the debutante at little or no expense. Rebekah is still heading the subscription list at the Plymouth Theater for the Professional Players.

UNCLE MALCOLM WHITMAN, the tennis champion, whose second wife was an opera singer, and they live in grandeur in New York, will do something handsome for niece Rose.

THE WHITMANS LIVE IN Union Park, South End, in the winters but Mother Adelaide has never parked there for long. We hear yarns that the friends who followed her to that forgotten part of the city now regret their impulse . . . but wherever Adelaide leads she is sure to have a following.

* * *

ROSE AND SISTER NANCY should be clever . . . they come of a literary and cultured family on the Chatfield-Taylor branch and the sporting, flowing bowl and good cheer on the Whitman side.

THEY ARE FRAIL PRETTY types . . . Rose was fortunate to be able to go to Foxcroft's school . . . you know it DID cost $5000 a term to get in and only two girls (of note) from each city were granted admission.

HAVE YOU NOTICED FROM these brief outlines of history which we have given you from time to time about the two-score or more debutantes whom SOCIAL REGISTER would consider most important . . . let us add here that this compilation was simply a matter of interest for your tea-table chatter . . . not what WE really think . . . how many divorces are mentioned in their families?

A Merry-Go-Round

IT WOULD BE INTERESTING and enlightening perhaps if these ex-wives would give a talk to the young debutante on the subject of matrimony . . . or . . . Why I Got a Divorce," wouldn't it?

HERE ARE THESE YOUNG maidens spending thousands to enter a social world where they will eventually take a husband . . . and divorcees urging them on . . . and ten years hence will they be in the same position? Divorced and remarried and "bringing daughters out"? What a merry-go-round!

Children's Play for Charity

One of the important and most interesting events of the season takes place today at 3 o'clock on the estate of Dr. and Mrs. George P. Denny at Smith's Point, Manchester. This takes the form of a pageant, under the direction of Miss Eveline Williams of the Gloucester Little Theater, in which over 50 children from society homes along the North Shore have been selected to take part.

The children taking part in the pageant are Frances Mary and Margaret Amory, Rose and Bobby Gardner, Constance and Nathaniel Dexter, Katherine, Elizabeth and George Putnam; Katherine Lawrence, Ruth Cunningham, Martha Pickman, Nancy Denny, Freddie and Constance Bradlee, Gordon Abbott, Evelyn Chase, Priscilla Blumer, Betty Smith, Harriet and Katherine Rundy.

MRS. POTTER PALMER, 3d, the former Rose Saltonstall Movius, will be the matron of honor. (Bachrach photo.)

MISS MARTHA MEANS, popular society girl, has also been selected for a place in the Orlandini wedding procession.

Wedding Takes Place Next Saturday

The announcement of Mrs. Potter Palmer 3d as the matron of honor, at the wedding next Saturday, Aug. 20, of Miss Laetitia Orlandini and Mr. Henry Greenough Nickerson, at the Little Church, Nahant, will be of interest to Boston society.

Mrs. Palmer was formerly Miss Rose Saltonstall Movius, one of the leading debutantes of 1927-28, and a popular member of the Junior League and Vincent Club, whose wedding at the First Church, Unitarian, Chestnut Hill, last February, was one of the great events of the season.

In Bridal Party

The prospective bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vittorio Orlandini of 123 Marlborough st., has selected some of the prettiest debutantes of her presentation season to attend her at the 4 o'clock ceremony. They are Miss Elizabeth Hamlin, Miss Martha Means, Miss Elsie Brewer and Miss Elizabeth Thomas, all of Boston.

Mr. Nickerson, the son of Mrs. William G. Nickerson and the late Mr. Nickerson of Common st., Dedham, will have his brother, Mr. William Nickerson, also of Dedham, as his best man. The group of six ushers includes Mr. Edward Orlandini, brother of the bride; Mr. Stirling Adams of Norwood, Mr. Arthur Vernon Woodworth, Jr., and Mr. Robert Hamlin, brother of one of the bridesmaids, both of Boston; Mr. Francis Richardson of Charlestown and Mr. Albert Nickerson of Dedham, another brother of the bridegroom.

Reception at Club

The Rev. Francis Lee Whittemore, rector of Dedham, is to officiate at the service. A number of family dinners are to precede the event, and on Saturday, before the wedding, Mrs. Curtis Guild, the bride's aunt, is to entertain the wedding party at luncheon.

Following the ceremony a reception will be held at the Vahant Club, for the attendants and guests, of which a number are expected from Philadelphia and New York.

Mrs. Potter Palmer is entertaining Miss Orlandini at her mother's estate, Squam Lakes, New Hampshire, this week.

Mrs. Bremer Opens Theater

Mrs. E. Parker Bremer of Dublin, N. H. has just achieved a very delightful creation, or perhaps we had better call it a recreation, since she has remodeled her fascinating old barn at Yonder Farm into a very modern and artistic theater, and was assisted in the decorative work by Mrs. Claude Burrage who has had such success with the Treasure Ship on New Street, where she has some rarely beautiful antiques.

The theater is called Yonder Theater after the farm on which it is situated. The opening of this unique and delightful playhouse is to take place in the midst of the most stylish event of the Dublin Social Season, namely the Dublin Horse Show, which is to be held there during the week-end of the 20th.

Summer Activities at Shore Resorts

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE YOEMANS from New York have opened their beautiful home, "Cherry Hill," at Plymouth for the rest of the season. Cherry Hill is one of the oldest and most beautiful estates of Plymouth. The house sits up on a hill with graceful trees about it, and looks down over a terraced garden and well-kept lawn.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Vilas, Dr. and Mrs. Lynch and Mrs. George Platt Brett are visiting the Yoemans. Mrs. Vilas was before her marriage Miss Georgette Yoemans, Mrs. Lynch Miss Polly Yoemans and Mrs. Brett Miss Isabelle Yoemans.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Vilas leave today for a trip to Quebec and on their way back are to stop at Lake George to visit the Hugh Paines, after which they will return to Cherry Hill for the rest of the season.

MRS. IRVING PARIS AND her small daughter Star are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Russell at Hingham, the Russells summer home. Mrs. Paris was Miss Barbara Russell before her marriage.

GUESTS OF THE HOTEL Rock-Mere, Marblehead, honored Mrs. Morrison McMath of Rochester yesterday with a tea on the upper deck of the Fo'castle in honor of her 73d birthday. Mrs. McMath, who is well known in Greater Boston society circles, is the widow of the distinguished Rochester jurist. Despite her years, Mrs. McMath has the charm and vivacity of youth and continues with the many social and philanthropic activities for which she is so noted. A bevy of attractive North Shore subdebs acted as ushers.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN K. HOWARD of 177 Marlborough st., are having a small but select dance tonight at their summer home in Manchester. Mrs. Hendricks Whitman is entertaining a number of guests at dinner, before the dance.

Summer Styles of the Fashionables

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

Perhaps you have noticed the smart Mrs. William Endicott. Her home is in Wenham, but she is seen here, there and everywhere on the North Shore and is always a striking figure.

Mrs. Endicott is one of those clever women who find many ways of increasing the number of ensembles in her wardrobe. She is always interestingly dressed and this is another point in her favor, not just dressed but interestingly dressed with some clever little touch that makes one stand out distinguished. Such is the lady's taste! Have you seen how delightfully statuesque she looks in her cool white silk frock that she wears in such a distinguished manner. You wonder if ever such a frock were seen before, and it is her taste in wearing it you know.

White Sport Dress

Then there is smart little Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell with her liquid brown eyes, her lovely skin and her swell little figure. How well she looked the other day in her white silk sport dress with red trimmings. Red is always becoming to brunettes, and Mrs. Wardwell wears it delightfully. Her little daughters, Mary Porter and Polly, are often with her at the social gatherings. They are beautifully dressed, too, you know that delightful "facon d' habbuller" runs in families. Have you noticed it?

Miss Alice Wood, daughter of Mrs. Orrin Wood of Brookline and Cataumet, always looks charming. She is an attractive young lady to start with and you know that is a help with finding and wearing pretty frocks. Miss Wood is an ardent sailor and her little athletic figure is well set off in a pair of white sailor pants and a sailor blouse. That's the test you know to look delightful in overalls or an evening gown with sequencies, and Alice is capable of just that. She is a blonde and one of the most popular of the young folks on the South Shore.

A Cohasset Beauty

One of the most delightful young ladies on the South Shore colony is Miss Carol Crocker who is spending the summer at Cohasset with her family, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. W. Crocker. Have you happened to notice her in her chic little tennis outfit with tiny bow on the shoulder and that certain touch of charm about her; or maybe you have seen her in an afternoon frock of printed foulard, beautifully fitted yet simple in line, and a large dark blue shade hat, she is altogether fetching.

You see, Miss Carol has just returned from a six months stay in Paris where she has been studying —perhaps the art of looking charming. Paris has always had je mais to say in the line of beautiful women.

Then the North Shore finds Miss Anne Warren, daughter of Mrs. Samuel D. Warren, who has charmed many this summer in a beautiful white lace gown that fits her figure to perfection and sweeps the floor, and with her golden hair parted on the side and falling in charming waves about her face, she is altogether a delight to the eye.

Spellmans Leave for New Brunswick

William Spellman, of Whitman, father of Msgr. Francis J. Spellman, newly appointed Auxiliary Bishop of the Boston Archdiocese, was a passenger last night on the liner Saint John, bound with members of his family for a short vacation in New Brunswick. He will return next week.

MISS BETTY THOMAS will be another attendant when Miss Orlandini becomes the bride of Mr. H. G. Nickerson.

Bride at 8, Parted at 28

Hudson-Pearce Ceremony

The Leslie Lindsey Memorial Chapel of Emmanuel Church was filled late yesterday when Miss Katherine Cushing Pearce of Brookline, was united in marriage to Ralph Roland Hudson of Boston and Lincoln, Neb.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Cushing Pearce of Aspinwall ave. She was gowned in white mousseline de soie, lace trimmed, and wore a cap of real lace with a bridal veil of tulle. Her bouquet was of gardenias and lily of the valley.

Mrs. Kendall Clark of Wollaston, a cousin, had the role of matron of honor. Her gown was of pale blue printed mousseline de soie, worn with a white picture hat.

The bridesmaids were Miss Roxanne Christopher of Cambridge and Miss Marjorie Ring of Brookline.

Whitney Pearce, the bride's brother, was the best man and the ushers were J. Bryon Hull of Hingham and Peter J. Shehan of Providence, R. I.

Books—And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

After I had read Langston Hughes' poems, "The Dream Keeper," just issued by Alfred Knopf, I liked them all. I read a few aloud to my colored servant, James, who is from the South. I said to myself, "If he likes them, they are authentic. If he responds, especially to the 'blues' verses, then I shall know for a certainty that Hughes has interpreted well the heart and soul of his race."

James responded with loud guffaw, and then, to my surprise, he said: "They remind me of Paul Laurence Dunbar's poems."

That was high praise, but it was deserved.

You half sing the poems to yourself. I wondered immediately if any of them had been set to music. Here is a mine for some composer like Gershwin or Deems Taylor.

In a note on the "blues" poems, Mr. Hughes says:

"The 'blues,' unlike the spirituals, have a strict poetic pattern; one line, repeated, and a third line to rhyme with the first two. Sometimes the second line in repetition is slightly changed and sometimes, but very seldom, it is omitted. . . . The mood of the 'blues' is almost always despondency, but when they are sung people laugh."

I give only three stanzas of "Bound Nojh Blues" to show what beauty and strength are obtained by this method of simple repetition:

Goin' down de road, Lawd,
Goin' down de road.
Down de road, Lawd,
Way, way down de road.
Got to find somebody
To help me carry dis load.

Hates to be lonely,
Lawd, I hates to be sad,
Says I hates to be lonely,
Hates to be lonely an' sad.
But ever' friend you finds seems
Like they try to do you bad.

Road, road, road, O'
Road, road . . . road . . . road, road!
Road, road, road, O'
On de No'thern road.
These Mississippi roads ain't
Fit fer a hoppin' toad.

The title page announces that this collection is especially for young people. True, those of the jiggly, almost banjo-strumming kind, will appeal to youthful ears; but there are many verses here for a deeper significance than would at first appear. Take the simple "Song":

Lovely, dark, and lonely one,
Bare your bosom to the sun.
Do not be afraid of light,
You who are a child of night.

Open wide your arms to life,
Whirl in the wind of pain and strife.
Face the wall with the dark closed gate,
Real with bare brown fists—
And wait.

But Mr. Hughes sees not only the pathos of the Negro. He can be equally sentimental over a Parisian beggar-woman. Thus:

Once you were young.
Now, hunched in the cold
Nobody cares
That you are old.

Once you were beautiful,
Now, in the street,
No one remembers
Your lips were sweet.

Oh, withered old woman
Of rue Fontaine,
Nobody but Death
Will kiss you again.

The drawings and decorations by Helen Sewell are a perfect interpretation of the text.

Another of those questionnaires! This time a small book called "Are You a Genius?" by Robert A. Streeter and Robert G. Hoehn, published by Stokes and illustrated by O. Soglow.

Again I stand abashed, when I read the percentages of those (those who took an examination in the tests given. Yet some of them are easy. This, for instance:

Rearrange the following letters so that they make the name of an article of furniture. Chocu.

But I gave up on this one:

"There were 3 prisoners arraigned before a judge. The judge looked fiercely at the first and said, 'What have you to say for yourself?' The second one answered, 'Not guilty, your honor.' The judge retorted sharply, 'I wasn't speaking to you.' Whereupon the third one replied, 'I didn't say anything.' How do you account for this strange procedure?"

Since you be kept awake all night, wondering, as I did, before I peeped at the answer, I shall tell it to you. The judge was crosseyed!

If I had guessed it, I might have been pleased with myself, but victory in such cases seems to me as profitless as winning a game of solitaire. However, there are thousands who will revel in this little volume, with its "brain twister" mathematical problems. I just haven't that kind of mind.

In their famous "Bonibooks in Cloth" series, which retail at $1, Albert & Charles Boni have included "Best American Mystery Stories," selected and with an introduction by Carolyn Wells. Twenty tales in all, some excellent, some only fair, and a few with little to recommend them.

Miss Wells says that with the advent of Conan Doyle, the English writers fell into a stride with which it is not easy to keep pace. Ben Ames Williams, Arthur Somers Roche, Geleit Burgess and a few of the others make a brave showing, but other readers may not agree with me. The volume is well worth dipping into, certainly it is worth far more than a dollar.

ADMISSION OF KILLING DENIED BY LANCASTER

Courthouse, Miami, Fla., Aug. 13 (INS)—Capt. William N. Lancaster today flatly denied that he ever told Mrs. Ida Clyde Clarke, mother of Haden Clarke, that he killed the youth who supplanted him in the affections of Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix.

Mrs. Clarke, in a statement to police, quoted Lancaster as saying to her in her apartment:

"Sometimes I think I killed Haden."

LANCASTER DENIES STATEMENT

Chief Defense Counsel James M. Carney asked the first time if he made the remark, when he resumed the stand today at his own request in his defense of a charge he killed Clarke.

"I did not," Lancaster replied to Carney's question.

Albert H. Hamilton, ballistics expert, was recalled and State's Atty. W. Vernon Hawthorne sought to establish Hamilton was seeking notoriety in volunteering for the defense.

"You gave out pictures of yourself and interviews on arriving in Miami?"

"I did."

"Why?"

"To help the newspapermen earn their salaries," he reported.

SKULL AGAIN ON EXHIBITION.

With Clarke's skull and a protractor, Hamilton again demonstrated the angle of the bullet through Clarke's head.

Haden Clarke, the day before he was shot, told Harry Antrobus, he didn't know which way to turn or what to do, Antrobus, an automobile salesman, testified.

Called by the defense, Antrobus said he told Clarke he would have to repossess Clarke's car unless the April 17 payment was met, he said.

"I have no money, and don't know where I can get it," Clarke said, according to the witness.

CHATTERTON IS BRENT'S BRIDE

Harrison, N. Y., Aug. 13 (INS)—Ruth Chatterton, actress, and George Brent, actor, were married here today by Justice of the Peace Winfred C. Allen.

The witnesses were Virginia Hammond and Frances Starr, an actress.

It was only yesterday that Miss Chatterton became free to marry Brent whose name has been linked with hers for months. A surprise hearing in Minden, Nev., yesterday gave Ralph Forbes, a divorce from her and it was undoubtedly this which caused Miss Chatterton to pick today as her wedding day.

Previous to the divorce Miss Chatterton and Forbes had come to an agreement as to the division of property.

New Princeton Head

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 13 (AP)—Appointment of the Rev. Edward Howell Roberts as registrar and secretary of Princeton Theological Seminary was announced today. He succeeds the Rev. Paul Martin, who retired in June after 16 years of service.

Former Justice Holmes to Lose $10,000 a Year

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—After spending a lifetime interpreting and applying laws, that master of them, Oliver Wendell Holmes, finds legal technicalities will cost him $10,000 this fiscal year.

He resigned only a few months ago on the eve of his 91st birthday, after almost 30 years on the Supreme Court bench. Then he was eligible to draw $20,000 for the remainder of his life, only to have that cut in half by the economy bill.

As interpreted, the bill provides that no federal judge who had resigned could draw more than $10,000 a year in retirement pay.

PUNCH TO AID ROOSEVELT

GENE TUNNEY JAMES A. FARLEY

Gene Tunney, former world's heavyweight champion, has enlisted with his punch in the drive to elect the Roosevelt-Garner ticket. He is shown here conferring with Chairman Farley of the Democratic national committee, who is directing the campaign. (International News Photos)

C. D. of A. to Meet

Mrs. Katherine T. Salmon, of Cambridge, one of the directors of the Catholic Daughters of America, will be one of a group of Daughters from New England who will attend the national convention of the Catholic Daughters meeting in Washington, August 13 to 16.

HARRIMAN SEES BIG SAVINGS

Washington, Aug. 13 (AP)—At least another $800,000,000 reduction in federal expenses is expected of the next session of Congress by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Harry I. Harriman, president of the chamber, said so in a statement today as the executive committee of the non-governmental agency met.

Federal appropriations for this year are $500,000,000 less than those for last year, he said.

He suggested that public construction and public works be reduced $200,000,000; that veterans' administration appropriations slashed $100,000,000 and that $150,000,000 be saved by abandoning activities the Chamber has repeatedly opposed as improperly competitive with private enterprise.

Autos Crash After Pedestrian Is Hit

In a double auto crash near Martin's pond, North Reading late last night, a pedestrian was run down and seriously injured, and the occupants of the two cars suffered numerous cuts and bruises.

Fred Dill, 45, of Lebanon st., Melrose, walking, was struck by an auto driven by Leo R. Sennett of East Broadway, South Boston. Sennett stopped and the auto following him, driven by James Townsend, of Ash st., Waverley, hit him.

BIG BAPTIST SCHOOL OPENS

The nineteenth annual School of Methods of the New England Baptist Convention opens Monday at Ocean Park, Maine, and continues until August 27. An extensive and widely inclusive program has been arranged both for young and old. The Rev W. G. Towart will serve as dean. Already camps and hotels are receiving guests and leaders expect all accommodations to be filled to capacity.

There will be six divisions of the young people in the Youth Forum. It is planned to make these groups small and afford sufficient opportunity for real discussion of youth problems as they occur in young people's work in the church as well as their own personal problems. A large number of Baptists from Boston and suburbs will attend and take an active part.

Among the many interesting courses and lectures are such as hear the titles: Story telling for teachers, history of Baptists, religion in the home church organized for service, peasantry and dramatics, psychology and religion, church school management, the life of Paul, Old Testament poetry, the life of Christ, the christian conception of God, projects and handiwork, and many more.

Prominent among the teachers are Rev Paul Judson Morris, Prof. E. E. Jones, Rev. O. P. Campbell, Dr. W. N. Donovan, Rev. Alex Henderson, Dr. R. M. Vaughan, Miss Florence L. Bruce, Mrs. H. L. Perry, Miss Dorothy Dolan, Mrs. W. G. Towart and many more.

CATHOLIC ASTRONOMER WILL SEE ECLIPSE

The Rev. Paul A. McNally, S. J. director of the Georgetown observatory, will lead one of two expeditions which will go from Washington, D. C., to Maine and New Hampshire to observe the total eclipse on Aug. 31. The other group will be made up of staff members of the naval observatory under the leadership of Capt. G. H. J. Kepler.

PRESIDENT HOOVER WILL ACCEPT GIBBONS STATUE

President Hoover will attend tomorrow the unveiling of the memorial statue of the late James Cardinal Gibbons at Washington and will accept personally the gift of the monument on behalf of the people of the United States.

The invitation to the President to attend the ceremony, extended by Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody, was accepted at the White House. The unveiling will occur tomorrow preceding the formal opening of the golden jubilee convention of the K. of C.

Perhaps the most spectacular feature of the K. of C. convention will be a parade to be participated in by representatives of the order from every state in the union. It was announced that bands from many cities and large delegations will come from Detroit, Brooklyn, New York, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Newark, Philadelphia and many other cities.

The exercises at the dedication will be broadcast throughout the United States and Canada by the National Broadcasting Company. The exercises will start at 3 p. m. Eastern Standard Time.

And He Sent Them to Heal the Sick

In all Christian Science Churches tomorrow the soul will be the subject for religious discussion. In this lesson comes consideration of healing such as Christ performed.

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Then he called his 12 disciples together and gave them power and authority over all devils and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick...And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing everywhere" (Luke 9:1,2,6).

The Lesson Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Knowing that Soul and its attributes were forever manifested through man, the Master healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, feet to the lame, thus bringing to light the scientific action of the divine Mind on human minds and bodies and giving a better understanding of Soul and salvation" (p. 210).

The Present Belongs to Youth . . . What Is He Doing With It?

Timely Warning to Young People

In a communication sent broadcast to churches and clergymen over the country the Federal Council of Churches, through its social service department, gives advice both for old and young. There is considerable apprehension on the part of these church leaders in America lest youth with its new born freedom step out of all bounds of discipline and moral leadership. Among other things the Council states:

"Not only the churches, but all communities, must also seriously to heart the fact that unless the children of today are properly guided, if not wholesome recreational and social opportunities and furnished good life-patterns by their elders, the inevitable result will be that considerable numbers of them will be added to the criminal population of the coming decade. The churches, which stand for the redemption of the individual and society, cannot but hold that a primary means of achieving a solution of many of the menacing problems which we now face is to bring individual and community life to a basis of integrity, mutual confidence and goodwill."

"We also wish to point out that one of the major needs of the present time, as indicated by moral confusion and the acuteness of the divorce problem, is the application of scientific intelligence and of Christian attitudes to the problems of marriage and the family. The religious spirit seeks in marriage, not a selfish happiness merely, but an occasion for beautifying human life and providing a sound structure of home and family living upon which the strength of national life depends."

Christian Endeavor Training School

At East Northfield, Massachusetts, The Christian Endeavor Summer School opens next Monday. This school is a part of the Christian Endeavor Conference and is accredited by the International Council of Religious Education for the training of church school leadership.

Y.M.H.A. Cares for Many Children

Some 225 children between the ages of 7 and 14 are attending the Summer Day Camp conducted by the Y. M. H. A. at their headquarters at 108 Seaver st., Roxbury. The large increase over last year made it necessary to admit no new members after the first few days of the opening, whereas previous summers new members were admitted throughout the entire summer. Judging from the waiting list and the constant inquiries the total registrations for the summer would unquestionably reach 400 if the number were not restricted due to lack of facilities and counsellors.

The program, which includes land craft athletics, dramatics and outings, follows as closely as possible that of a real camp. The activities for the most part are carried on in the section of Franklin Park directly opposite the "Y."

Many Girls Go to Ocean Park

Camp Ataloa, situated at Ocean Park, Maine, will open next Thursday. Youngsters from all parts of New England whose parents are connected with the Northern Baptist Conference are already packing their bags for a glorious time by the ocean and in the pine woods.

The trustees of the New England Baptist Conference by vote established this camp and made plans for its proper conduct. Last year 80 girls attended. Dr. Peterson, Mrs. Mable Hall Hardy, 10 counsellors. Dr. Clarence Frank as chapel leader, and the office helpers conducted the camp. With a few changes the personnel will be the same this year.

Rev. George L. Paine Sails for Europe

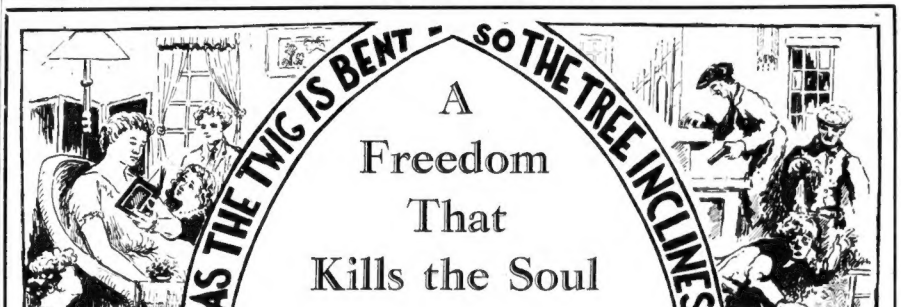
Another short visit to Russia is the ambition of the Rev. George L. Paine, executive secretary of the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, who sailed last Saturday on the Gripsholm. He will also visit Denmark, Geneva and Sweden. His first visit to Russia last summer brought him close to 200 invitations to talk on what is happening in Sovietland. Most of his audiences were church people. Mrs. Paine is accompanying her husband part of the way.

Young Israel Has Boat Party Tomorrow

The annual boat party sponsored by Young Israel of Greater Boston will be held tomorrow. The committee has made arrangements for the party to sail on the Steamer Myrtle on which there will be dancing. After a two-hour sail, they will land at a beach where bathing, boating, ball games and other sports may be enjoyed. The proceeds of the affair will be used for the educational work of Young Israel.

S. Murray Paul is chairman of the committee, and Rose Friedman is chairman of the Sisterhood committee. Tickets may be procured only from members of the committee or at the office, 161 Ruthven st., Roxbury.

The Saturday afternoon class is conducted by Rabbi Jacob Kraft, who is giving a series of lectures on Jewish personalities Thursday evenings at 8:45. Young men and women are invited to attend these lectures.



"AMERICA the home of the free" sings the light-hearted and thoughtless youth, and proceeds to speed up his powerful six-cylinder machine on a crowded thoroughfare, endangering the lives of many. "America the land of the brave" cries the reckless young man with a revolver in his hip pocket watching his time to enter the bank and hold up the cashier. America needs a new interpretation for many a youth today who has broken from home and church discipline to go it on his own. A new kind of courage is asked for, and a type of freedom which endangers none and builds character for those who possess it. It did take courage in the olden days to gird on armor and go forth to do battle with evil knights, but it takes more and a higher kind of courage today to stand for justice, high principles and honesty in the midst of temptation to do otherwise.

THE young man or young woman who in the name of freedom disregards the advice of parents, ministers and teachers and tries experiments in unsocial action, experiments that were tried by men and women thousands of years ago and found disastrous, are foolish beyond words. Don't they know that civilization proceeds upon stepping-stones laid by their ancestors? Examine if you will, girls and boys, each step to see if it is solid, but once finding it sound, do not spend your time on a low level just because you scorn what your elders believe to be right.

Take what you find is good out of the past, and shape your course to finer things. The right kind of freedom and the purest brand of courage injure none, and can build individual manhood and womanhood, such as America needs woefully.

This educational endeavor is made possible by the following public-spirited citizens who are striving to make our community a finer and a better place in which to live.

Girl About Town

By ALYCE SIEMENS

Silly Verse No. 1:
Would that I was a little bug
Content to snuggle in a rug.
But here am I a handsome mugg—
Plotting to steal from you a hug!
—Silly Lillie.

It Is to Ha-Ha!

Coolidge Corner's Bob Sullivan is telling about the poor chap who went to Hollywood to try to become one of those famous movie directors . . . He finally got an interview, after weeks of waiting and fretting . . . The producer who was interviewing him said, "Are you a college man?" . . . And the chap replied, "Yes sir, Harvard A. B. and Columbia M. A." . . . The producer pondered over this for a second or two and then quickly said, "Say some big words!"

Add New Citizens

While John J. Kerrigan was fishing last Thursday morn old "Doc" Stork left a baby boy for him at St. Margaret's Hospital . . . And on July 30 the Malcolm MacMillans of Roxbury were baby-boy-gifted! . . . Walter Murphy, running for Rep. of Ward 20, is running after butterflies, fish and mosquitoes at Hummerock Beach right now . . . A list of Boston's eligible young bachelors would be culpably incomplete if we failed to mention axe-grinder-star Sam H. Cohen, youthful Roxbury barrister who is candidating for the House from Ward 12 . . . Though there are rumors that the Clark Gablelishly dark Attorney Cohen is not 100 per cent fancy free, faint lady never won fair heart!

Ogunquit Once-Overs:

Although Seth Parker's gang have taken up their beds in Buckport, after a week at Ogunquit, Bennett "Celus" Kilpack stayed behind and is still putting on the good old "dawg" for the benefit of the curious mainers! . . . Expects to be a first-nighter at "Growth," a new play by poet and short story writer Dana Burnett and Dr. Randall Hoyt, whose first venture as a playwright it is . . . Cast includes professionals vacationing at Ogunquit with Margaret (who began her stage career at the Copley Players) Mullen, Louise (of-the-movies, "The Greeks Had a Name For It" and "Arrowsmith") Closser, Alan Tower . . . And Donald Douglas, who is somewhat of a curiosity since he's recently returned from doing "Sergeant O'Hara" opposite Jean Crawford in her latest, "Rain" . . . Donald Gallcher, who played two in 99 different roles on Broadway" . . . Mrs. Shinao (of the dancing family) Braggiotti vacationing there.

Snooping and Yelling:

Cliff "Trumpeting One" Natalie's heart beating for a red-headed woman! . . . Chelsea's Walter Powers, whose Sweet Nothings for the last three years have been going in one ear and out the other of Derry's (N. H.) popular Alma Ricard, has high hopes for a Fall-time Match . . . Them-Ones' . . . Indicator pointing to those Newton traveloves, Lil Bartoli and Jimmy Declimont, making an April Fool in the late Fall . . . With the Jackie (Mary Hurley) Hennessys at Revere thumbing crib sheet fingers to outfit that "little room for Junior" for their first wee one's September "coming to out house'!

Snooping on the Loose:

Depression means nothing to Arthur "Ike" Lamoureaux-at-the-Ritz Martel what with his putting his wife on the S. S. Empress Britain last Saturday for a private tour of touring of Paris, Holland and Switzerland . . . Mrs. M's superraising made Arthur give in and now his extra pennies are hustling those cablegrams back and forth . . . Can it be devotion in a Big Way? . . . Super-booking representative Walter Batchelor and his actress wife Janet Reade a little bit over Janet's friendship with Libby Holman who is stage dotted-lined through Walter's managing eh? . . . We've heard that the low down on that South Boston copper is that he was really only snagged by one chap! . . . One of the two boys who happened to be standing on a Dorchester ave. corner waiting for his Sweet One to come out of the drugstore . . . He didn't care much for the way his wan neck was grabbed and told to move on . . . Therefore the knocking out jab! . . . Fabien Sevitsky getting on regular-fellowish that he could take Henry Taylor's postal from Atlantic City addressed to "Boston 'Hotcha Conductor" Sevitzky . . . How about another hotcha overture like the "Scandals" hits fm of two weeks back? . . . Dr. Dick Lynch spending no time mailing billet-doux these days but stepping in with a new snap to his step, looking 'em over again and still a bachelor! . . . And now those Broadway tongue-waggers are at it again—what with Walter Winchell and his rumors on a motor trip and with Paul Yawitz doing the pinch-hit act again—since last Monday . . . In this time with the time, we notice! . . . Two weeks ago Winchell's medico put his thumbs down on the dynamic gossip reporting that $6500 per week offer at the Capitol theater . . . An intimate of Libby Holman Reynolds tells us that young Smith Reynolds —from his first look at Libby—was the most jealous of individuals over about places . . . Jealous of even Libby's most casual acquaintance, men and women alike . . . That there is a very prominent and wealthy New Yorker who has been admiring Libby this long and is now sharing her grief with possible hopes for his own Making Her His someday! . . . That the reason Reynolds took up aeronautical engineering was because he was such a dud in the midst of Libby's talented friends that he simply had to do something to be noticed and talked about.

'DEVIL AND THE DEEP' Is Reviewed by Harleigh Schultz

Loew's Orpheum Has Another BIG STAGE BIL

'Filmament' Sees a New Star Rise

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

The Metropolitan has some sterling showmanship set forth in its new show. The class runs in the S's—Stage, Sevitzky and Screen Souvenirs. These three are standard; the footlight revue is a treat, Fabien Sevitzky brilliant as usual, and that film feature that carries the onlooker back into time's vista is stellar. Only the photoplay falls short; yet it is not without entertainment value.

Devil and the Deep," the featured picture, is reminiscent in its big scenes of the sinking of the submarine S-4 off Provincetown about the time the silent drama passed out and sound came in. Charles Laughton's superb acting makes it primarily a story of a madman officer in the British navy, who is an insanely jealous husband. He breaks an under-officer (Cary Grant—Archie Leach to you Bostonians!) whom he suspects. Taking his place comes Gary Cooper; his "amour," discovered, leads the husband to plot his death underseas in the submarine.

There is strong, virile drama here in the making. Up to the point of the crash at sea, the photoplay is quite neatly handled; but thereafter its value is chiefly as a demonstration of the air-chamber method of saving men trapped in a sunken craft of the type. So far as the dramatic action goes the whole affair is "stagey" in the extreme. The sub remains about as it was, and there is little suggestion of the grim horror that made "Men Without Women" the outstanding submarine film of all time.

There are other flaws, and any man acquainted with submarines would find a hundred bones to pick with the director.

For Tallulah Bankhead, this is just another in the series of had "breaks" she has had ever since she entered pictures. Strive as she will, she is unable to reach the pinnacle to which a stronger and better contrived theme would have lifted her. Mr. Cooper does well enough, but all the real honors go to the newcomer, Mr. Laughton.

The rest of the show is amazingly good. The revue, "Impressions," is replete with entertainment; some of its scenes are so fine—the finale one, for instance—as to impel vast applause. As the stars participating are splendid, and the whole unit is one of the best yet.

"Screen Souvenirs" shouldn't be missed by any lover of pictures. It has riotting humor, as usual, but for us the best sequence was that showing the inimitable Hobart Bosworth in his palmy days as the screen's outstanding lover.

Mr. Sevitzky and orchestra turn to Scotland and the thistle for inspiration; the number elicits an ovation.

Made in Mexico

The Mexicans will have their inning next Monday at the Fine Arts when the attraction will be "Flame of Mexico." This picture of the land below the Rio Grande has been acclaimed as the first to depict Mexico in its true character. The producer is Juliet Barrett Roubles, wife of the secretary to the late Dwight W. Morrow, ambassador to Mexico, with the help of Mexican actors, Mrs. Rubles made a picture which critics, after seeing it at a preview, aver will stand as a classic of camera craft.

Howard All Set for Opening in Two Weeks

In two weeks the Old Howard re-opens with a big hurrah, displaying the attractions of the New Empire Burlesque Association. Vaudeville and high grade pictures will round out the program. The box office opens on Monday, Aug. 22.

VARIETY IN EXCELLENCE ON THE STAGE AND SCREEN

Harpo Marx, clowning champ, in "Horse Feathers," at the Paramount and Uptown.

Clive Back to Copley Soon

E. E. Clive is coming back to the Copley Theater. This announcement from the Copley management followed the completion of negotiations yesterday assuring the return of a favorite Boston actor, with an opening date early in September.

Mr. Clive's return to the Copley, which will be welcome news to his hosts of friends and admirers, is sponsored by a group of prominent Bostonians, who feel that the Copley, a spot from which he has been absent only two years out of 16, presents the perfect field for his talents.

In addition to Mr. Clive the group will include some of the favorites of last season. The business management will be headed by E. E. Underhill, who was associated with Mr. Clive for many years.

Scales Beware!

Kate Smith, now appearing at RKO Keith's, believes in remaining "as is" as to avoirdupois, is blonde and hates to buy clothes . . . Loves to collect perfume and has about 300 bottles of it . . . a half dozen of which are generally in use at one time . . . sometimes wears tortoise shell glasses tipped on the end of her affable nose . . . never had a lesson and learns all her songs by having them played to her once or twice . . . then juggles the notes around and pays no attention to standard tempo . . . wrote the lyrics for "When the Moon Comes Over the Mountain," her signature song on the air . . . devoutly wishes she had more time for that sort of thing.

Hollywood in Mimicry

The Publix Scollay, starting Monday, will offer its patrons an unusual vaudeville feture in "Hollywood On Prade," consisting of the "doubles" of nine movie stars, Greta Garbo, Poli Negri, Buster Keaton, James Cagney, Nancy Carroll, Slim Summerville, Lupe Velez, Jean Harlow and Estelle Taylor.

The comedians, Clark and Verdi, promise a lot of fun in their skit "Re-United." Nate Busby and Company will do a blackface sketch, "It's Christmas in the Big House." Frad Weber is a clever ventriloquist and proves it in "Take It Easy On car." A dance revue will offer a round-up of steps in "Whirls of Tops" to complete the bill.

Holiday on Cape

The Theatre Unit will present "Death Takes a Holiday," at West Falmouth next week. Byron McGrath will play Prince Sirki.

Four Marx-Men Hit Bull'seye to Ring Bell for Laughter

Laughter is the thing at the Paramount and Uptown. The Four Marx Brothers have again come to town, this time in "Horse Feathers." It's a perfect bedlam as to plot and funmaking—the craziest quilt of "gags," but uproariously comic.

Followers of the Marxians are legion, so big business is the order of the day. Here they are at it again. In the same old frantic frenzy of clowning, doing the most senseless things and getting whirls of merriment out of their antics. If at times the humor does lag, or seem a bit forced at others, there is ample good matter to make up for the shortcomings, for all in all this is a hilarious Marx product, wherein the four brothers do what they start out to do—entertain by the brand of comedy they have made famous.

It is utterly useless to attempt to tell what it's all about. There's no rhyme nor reason to the piece. For instance, when Groucho remarks that one cannot burn the candle at both ends, Harpo produces a couple so lighted from his voluminous trousers.

When a seal is needed to a document, the same Harpo trots out the kind of seal that used to play vaudeville when there was vaudeville. That's the sort of nonsense in which the film abounds.

Groucho is president of a college. Harpo is the village dogcatcher. Chico the iceman and bootlegger, and Zeppo the campus sheik. There's a girl, of course, the shapely Thelma Todd. And there's a football game. Put 'em all together and they spell "Horse Feathers."

Harpo steals the picture with some bits that are riotous. That, for example, in which he does a chariot race in a street cleaner's cart. And his own particular method of snaring dogs. Then, in his only serious moment, he gets a big hand with his very fine music.

Sterling Vaudeville Is Backed by Fine Film

By HARRIS MORGAN

When stage and screen shine together, it spells success. Manager Victor J. Morris at Loew's Orpheum this week presents his second stellar program, highlighted on the boards and on the silver sheet. It's superb throughout; the vaudeville is tiptop, and the photoplay, "Skyscraper Souls," is magnificent entertainment, too.

The footlight fare is headed by that magnetic personality, "N. T. G.", otherwise Nils T. Granlund, star entertainer of the first rank. He, and his colleagues on the program, score another triumph for the Loew "Big Name" policy, the show being one of the best yet.

N. T. G. brings with him a group of attractive girls whose singing, dancing and general entertainment ability rank high. Ben Alley, whose fame has hitherto been confined mostly to the radio world, gained a host of new admirers with his pleasing stage manner and captivating tenor voice. Old songs and new, delivered in typical Alley manner, came in for their share of applause from the enthusiastic audience.

Next came William Damarest, former Earl Carroll favorite, who, with his partner, did a bit of everything. His comedy, interspersed with dancing, was of the sparkling variety. Stan Kavanagh, the merry juggler, and the skating Masons add materially to the entertainment.

The screen feature, "Skyscraping Souls," keeps pace with the vaudeville in the presentation of big names. Warren William, the new idol, is supported in this thrilling drama of life in a big city building by a brilliant cast that includes Maureen O'Sullivan, Verree Teasdale, Anita Page, Norman Foster, Jean Hersholt and Wallace Ford.

Globe Trotter

The first sound motion pictures in connection with the Libby Holman-Smith Reynolds tragedy are presented in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News. There are striking airplane views of the magnificent estate, Reynolda, at Winston-Salem, N. C., where the young multimillionaire was shot to death. There are also pictures of the courthouse where Libby and Ab Walker, secretary and chum of the dead youth, will be tried. Walker is released as he leaves the courthouse after his release on bail accompanied by C. C. Hill, the youth in whose honor the barbecue party was given on the night of the fatal shooting.

John Gilbert and Bride Make Love in New Film at State

From spotlight hero of other days in the films, John Gilbert goes to the opposite type in "Downstairs," his own story done in the cinema and now featured on the Loew's State screen. Gilbert is a villain of the deepest dye, quite a contrast to the dapper Jack of the silent drama era. It should be stated at this point that the State is showing also an uproarious comedy starring Laurel and Hardy, in their very best form.

"Downstairs," from the feminine viewpoint, possesses unusual interest in that it shows Gilbert making love to Virginia Bruce, now, as everybody knows, his wife. The star penned the plot himself, and that he deliberately chose the role of the cad and crook for himself, shows a good deal of courage. His admirers will be glad to know that his voice comes through far better than in his other talkies, while his acting also is much improved.

The story deals with an Austrian household wherein the able Paul Lukas is the butler, taking as his bride Miss Bruce, a lady's maid. Gilbert pops up as the chauffeur for the baroness, who is mistress of the mansion; and from that time on there is hardly a crime that Gilbert doesn't commit.

The story has many good points, and is often made very interesting. Mona Bell's direction is being a tremendous aid.

Mr. Lukas is the best performer and gives whole sequences a biting realism which proved he is still able to "steal" pictures as of yore. His followers will note a striking change in him. Reginald Owen is another excellent actor, as is also Bodil Rosing.

The Laurel-Hardy film, titled "The Chimp," is a smash laughquake, funny from start to finish.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., Films Dramatic Story Laid in Darkest Africa

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Los Angeles, Aug. 13—An adventurous lad is young Carl Laemmle, Jr., always seeking something new. His next experiment is "Nagana," a dramatic tale laid in darkest Africa.

Louella O. Parsons

Cameras have been penetrating the jungle for many months to obtain exteriors. The interiors will be made right at Universal City, with Tala Birell and Paul Lukas as the chief emoters.

"Nagana," Junior tells me, is the native word for sleeping sickness. The scientific care necessary for this dread disease will all be shown.

The little excursion promised Charlie Farrell to the First National studios is all off. Charlie couldn't finish "Wild Girl" for Fox in time to keep his engagement to do the big hero in "Central Park" opposite Joan Blondell. The play was originally bought with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., in mind, but young Doug is still vacationing in Europe and couldn't make his plans to return in time. Wallace Ford was borrowed yesterday from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the role.

M-G-M Activities

"What's the idea of saying Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is quiet?" asks Joseph McGillicuddy Sherman. "We have seven companies working and many other pictures to come. One of the companies to start work on Sept. 1 will be the Buster Keaton unit. Buster has one more picture on his present contract and he is now searching for a story so he can get to work. He has signed for one more year with M-G-M at the same salary, which is something in these days. Buster, who has been really very sick, is reported well again by his physicians.

Gets Role at Last

Good looks is frequently a handicap. Take Russell Saunders, the lad every Southern Californian used to root for when he was a star on the U. S. C. football team. What a player. The film companies all tried to sign Mr. Saunders after his graduation, but he just didn't want to act. He wanted to direct. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer gave him a chance as an assistant technical director, but every time he got under the feet of any of the M-G-M executives they all said "He should be in the movies." Well, he finally decided they were right and so he will play a part in "That's My Boy," Columbia's football epic.

A Line or Two:

The little boy, as beloved by the late Joseph Jackson, will be taken by his mother to see his grandparents in Winchester, Ky. Ethel, who is making a brave fight to carry on for the sake of little Shannon, plans to take him with her to Europe, but there they will both remain a year. Mother Ashton, who used to be so well known in Hollywood, is now in San Francisco, eager to return to the screen but unable to come to Hollywood unless there is something tangible in the offing. She played in many of Gloria Swanson's early pictures and was a well-known figure in Hollywood.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CLAUDIA MORGAN, comely daughter of RALPH, dancing at the Cocoanut Grove with TOM HALEY, football player. CLAUDIA, unable to speak above a whisper because she yelled so hard at the football game. WALTER BYRON, recuperating in San Francisco after three pictures in a row. LOLA LANE to be maid of honor for JEAN CARMEN, WALLIE LOHMAN'S bride. CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER giving them the wedding and inviting a few of their close friends for the reception and dinner. GARY COOPER, host at a spaghetti party. JUNE COLLYER, who is entertaining her father and mother, treating them to a luncheon at the Brown Derby. INA CLAIRE sending JACK GILBERT a swell wire of congratulation. A grand gal, INA. CLAUDETTE COLBERT, who has spoken more French since the Olympic games started than she has in years, dining on the Roosevelt Patio. HOWARD HILL who has been at the Hollywood Plaza with young STEWART BRISBANE, having a test made at Universal. WALLACE BEERY getting a lot of attention from the tourists on the Roosevelt Patio. DARRIL ZANUCK inviting BARBARA BEE LYON to have dinner with her on her first birthday. CHARLIE CHAPLIN and PAULETTE GODDARD dining tete a tete at the Biltmore.

"A FOOL AND HIS MONEY ARE SOON DIPLOMATIZED!"

Look at that bunch trying to push Unk into that GYP Cab; the rate is a thousand million dollars the first quarter and you NEVER get there.

Beware, Sam! If once they get you into that cab, they'll take you for a sideswipe from which no traveler ever collected accident insurance. Remember that old saw—

17 IN HOSPITALS AFTER 2 FIRES

New York, Aug. 13 (AP)—A fire believed to have been of incendiary origin destroyed a four-story tenement building on Bushwick ave. in Brooklyn today. Twelve persons were burned and overcome by smoke. One is expected to die.

John Titerman, a filling station attendant across the street threw stones through the windows of the buildings to rouse the occupants, then ran upstairs to knock on all doors. This done, as found his own escape cut off and was forced to the roof, by which he made his way to another building.

An hour later five other persons were injured when a three-story frame building on Newark ave. in Brooklyn caught fire. Two women on the second floor became panic-stricken and leaped out of a window, leaving three children to be rescued by smoke.

Firemen rescued them and revived them with inhalators. All the injured were taken to hospitals.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

A Little o' This, a Little o' That!

A night club is a night club, of course, and the usual thing to expect is a few pretty girls in scanties, a master of ceremonies, a tenor and a check at the end of the evening for your ginger ale plus the Government tax. Nevertheless, patronists are optimistic, although there are only a handful of the night places left, we make the rounds hoping, perhaps, something will happen. Something did happen at the Hollywood Restaurant Tuesday night. N. T. G. introduced a slim fellow in a gray suit with baggy pants from his table at the floorside—W. W. Waters, commander of the scattered Bonus Expeditionary Force and, instead of taking a bow, the young soldier leader went to the center of the floor, took a position in front of the microphone and thundered out his loyalty to the cause of the bonuseers. His eyes flashed, his jaw squared, his hands went flying in dramatic gestures as he stormed against "Hoover, the Humanitarian," told of receiving his $724 bonus check and handing it over to his starving buddies, explained he had only a quarter in his possession at the time and defied anyone to find fault with the cause to which he had devoted himself. There was considerable applause. But there were jeers, too, and, at a table near me, a tall, broad-shouldered fellow started to rise menacingly and move toward Waters, but was restrained by his companion. "No damn business," he muttered, "saying anything against Hoover. Hoover's all right." It rather spoiled things, of course, that the chap was Bolsto. I don't think Mister Hoover approves of supporters who drink. At any rate Waters sat down. A few seconds later another fellow came over to Waters and denounced him for making a speech in a night club. Again Waters' eyes flashed and his jaw stuck out and he said: "I won't take anything like that from you." There was every indication that there was going to be a fist fight, but this time the girl and the man sitting with the young commander pulled him down and the other fellow walked off, glowering. Just in time, too, because they were blocking my view and I wanted to see the new string of beads Marion Martin was wearing for a costume.

A Well-Bread Town!

Solly Violinsky, noted for his ready wit, is back in town. He came back breathing enthusiasm about San Francisco. "Now there's a town, Frisco," he exploded. "They've even got two breadlines—one for white bread and one for rye."

So You'll Know!

Odd notes about people who are aren't odd. Otto Kahn hires Meyer Davis to furnish music at his social affairs, although his own son, Roger, leads a 14-piece band. Bernice Petkere (Mrs. Ed Connel) a housewife, turns songwriter and writes the leading song hit of the day "Lullaby of the Leaves." Rose Franken, another housewife, whose husband makes a decent living as a dentist, sits down in spare moments and writes a play called "Another Language." Outstanding play of the year. Aunt Jemima, radio's fattest singer, broadcasts for a "reducing" sponsor. Guy Lombardo holds a fiddle while leading his band, but can't play the darn thing. Rudy Vallee, a crooner, wants to be a politician. Ditto Gene Tunney, an ex-pugilist. Ozzie Nelson spends 18 years going to school with the idea of becoming a lawyer. He passes the bar exams and becomes an orchestra leader instead.

Song Title!

In these lethargic days, I find it refreshing to stumble across an occasionally original song title. Jimmy M'Hugh has just turned out a new ditty, for instance. It's titled, "I've Gotten Over the Bumps, the Measles and Mumps, I've Gotten Over the Flu, but I Can't Get Over the Moon, the Mountain—and You!"

Uh, Uh!

Unconscious humor as noted in the lobby of the Palace. A huge picture of Kate Smith and underneath the Palace's new slogan: "Everything Big but the Price."

Hollywood Primer!

Correcting Mr. Creel!

Writes George Creel about Jimmy Walker in the August 13th Collier's, "As a youth it was his ambition to be a mayor-maker, and even now when an orchestra strikes up his one song, "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May,' etc, etc'." Aw, now, Creel, be accurate. Didn't you know that he crashed out a mammy song back in 1907 tagged 'Black Jim'? And a sentimental ditty in 1908 called "Ain't All The Girls for Me," and a year before that, "I Like Your Way"? Also, "So Long, Mister Jeeper Long," and a touching ballad, "Meet Me After School"? And still another one, "After They Gathered the Hay," on the cover of which appeared the likeness of Jeanette Allen, whom he married later? It won't help you socially, George, but perhaps you'll thank me.

DRY RAIDERS IN NEW DRIVE ON SOUTH SHORE

Dry agents left prohibition headquarters in Franklin st. today for points along the South Shore with secret orders to clean up several de luxe speakeasies.

Two women conferred with one of the dry agents and later drove off in the direction of the Wollaston bld., ostensibly bound for Nantasket.

Two other dry agents admitted "there may be something doing in Boston and a suburb this afternoon," and said if arrests were made, persons involved would be booked at police stations and held for arraignment in federal court Monday.

It was learned that plans were made to co-operate with Hull police in mopping up a few places in Atlantic ave., in the Green Hill section of Nantasket, where liquor is dispensed to customers who pass scrutiny of "outlooks" familiar with visitors.

A squad of dry agents was also sent to Lawrence to check up on "tippers" and others in the vicinity of the American Legion convention.

GARBO BREAKS TRADITION

ment building, one of the numerous pieces of real estate she bought during the last few years.

The actress' family consists only of Sven and his wife and Greta's mother, a quiet woman of 62, who lives alone in a small flat near her home.

MOTHER SUPPORTS SELF

When Greta was born Mrs. Gustafson lived within a few blocks of her present residence.

When her husband died, Mrs. Gustafson had difficulty in supporting her children and educating them. Today, she could live like a queen at the expense of her daughter. But she prefers, as far as possible, to live on her own resources.

Sven, now 24, looks much like his sister. He also insists upon supporting himself, although Greta helped him by financing his linguistic studies in France and England.

Sven played in a Swedish film with Greta once, but Greta opposed his going to Hollywood. He tried his luck in journalism, reporting the races and the Stockholm Fair for Stockholm papers. At present he is employed in the publicity department of an American film company here.

GRETA SETS THE STYLE

One of his colleagues and his closest friend is Arne Borg, former world's swimming champion, who has high regard for Greta's swimming abilities. Also, in his training, the actress would have been a breast stroke swimmer of Olympic calibre, Borg maintains.

As expected, Garbo's arrival caused a minor fashion revolution. Young girls are seen by the hundreds wearing Garbo-esque berets pulled down over their foreheads as well as pliable golf jumpers such as the one the actress wore when she disembarked at Gothenburg.

Stockholm fashion houses reported receiving orders for "Garbo clothes" as far afield as Vienna and Moscow.

ROSES REUNITE M'CORMICKS

Chicago, Aug. 13 (AP)—Yellow roses, favorite flowers of Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, were a fragrant reminder today of a visit from her divorced husband, Harold F. McCormick.

The head of the International Harvester Co., who hurried back from the Pacific coast when Mrs. McCormick's illness became serious, sat at her bedside more than an hour last night. He carried an armful of the roses as he entered the room.

The couple's children, Fowler McCormick and Mrs. Muriel Hubbard, daily visitors, were not present when their father called. Another daughter, Mrs. Max Oser, is on her way from Switzerland to be with her mother. Estrangements resulting from the marital alliances of all three children have been healed by the mother's illness.

The condition of Mrs. McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., was reported by her physician as unchanged today.

Milk Trucks Guarded in Farmers' Strike

Sioux City, Ia., Aug. 13 (AP)—Deputy sheriffs were riding milk trucks in southern Iowa today to prevent violence in the "strike" farmers have organized to withhold farm products until prices are higher.

The producers are demanding $2.75 per hundred pounds for milk. The have been receiving a flat rate of $1, or about 8 cents a gallon.

Baby Drowns in Vat of Milkhouse

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 13 (INS)—Immersed in three feet of water in a cooling vat in the milkhouse near his home for several minutes before found, Leslie Rowland, 18 months old, died today in the arms of his mother while she and her husband hurried to a doctor.

4 BRIDGE STARS ELIMINATED

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 13 (AP)—A little known team of local players was the talk of the American Bridge League championship tournament today because they eliminated a powerful combination in the race for the challenge team of four title.

Benjamin J. Lissner, Michael Hollander, Sigmund Dornbuch and Lester J. Bachner—entered as the Shore Bridge Club—defeated David Burnstine and Howard Schenken, two former "Four Horsemen" players, and Charles Lochridge and Richard Frey, all from New York.

At the end of 30 boards the Asbury Park team was 215 points in front, placing it in the semi final matches tonight against the Cockford Club of New York, headed by Oswald Jacoby, the Cavendish and the Knickerbocker Clubs.

FLYING LUNCH DOWNS PLANE

Curtiss Field, L. I., Aug. 13 (INS)—Grounded—because of breakfast! This was the plight of Mrs. Frances Marsalis and Mrs. Louise Thaden this morning, when they canceled their endurance flight after 17 hours and 33 minutes in the air.

The bucket containing their meager morning refreshment smashed against the tip of the left wing of their cabin plane, tearing it free fairing, and it was decided over the coffee cups to come down to earth and have it fixed. The damage was slight, but the women preferred stopping now, rather than within a short distance of their goal of more than 122 hours.

FANNING

With GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Little Game o' Hearts. Inside Information.
Ball Players Chatter. He Thought Too Much.
About Rogers Hornsby. Tongue Tripped Him.

Inside Stuff on Baseball's Stormy Petrel

BALL PLAYERS ARE a clannish flock, as they should be, but they'll talk to a member of the brotherhood. When some of the grandstand and press box managers are around they can give a first-class exhibition of a silent clam. But they'll always welcome an old trooper into their midst and unburden their hearts to him. Particularly they'll open up to a fellow who doesn't give away state secrets and knows when, and when not, to mention names. You can get a lot of inside information over a friendly little game of hearts, casino, pinochle or that grand old-fashioned national indoor pastime of poker. We dropped around for a quiet little game the other evening. After shedding coat and tie, loosening our collar—yes, and taking off our brogans, too, for up in the hotel room shoeless feet among ball players are quite de rigeur—we got an earful of chatter about Rogers Hornsby in between hands. Here they are spilling some of it for you. We'll omit the names.

"SURE ROGERS HORNSBY plays the races . . . That's been an affliction of the ball players from time immemorial . . . But Hornsby seldom bet as much in a month as John McGraw did in a day . . . Most of us fellers have sense enough to leave the bangtails alone and stick to our own game . . . If we want to follow the hosses we'll get a street cleaner's job . . . But we don't see how they can hang Rogers Hornsby for race track betting as long as Charlie Stoneham owns the Giants . . . If a guy can own a race track, a stable of mules and bet fortunes on his and others' plugs and own a ball club at the same time, what's the use of sending a ball player to the electric chair if he insists in handing the bookies some of his wages now and then? . . . Don't know anything about Hornsby or anyone else betting on ball games . . . If they did that's a different thing.

"TROUBLE WITH HORNSBY is that he couldn't manage himself . . . Always getting in rows with his bosses . . . Don't mind him insisting on being boss of the playing end . . . There's been altogether too much interference from owners who don't know a fast one from a floater or a hookslide from a Texas leaguer . . . But Hornsby went beyond the playing end . . . Always after someone's job . . . Ball players aren't the only ones who hate a job stealer . . . And ball players hate a feller who insists in doing all their thinking for them . . . We want to be something besides wooden Indians and automatons.

"NO ONE BLAMES a manager for calling 'em for a young pitcher . . . When a guy knows batters and pitchers like John McGraw, Bill McKechnie and Connie Mack do ball players will not kick at signs from the bench . . . Why, in the old days Matty and Joe McGinnity were about the only pitchers that didn't look to Mugsy to tell 'em what to throw . . . Big Six and Joe had just as much experience and baseball brains as McGraw and John wisely let them alone . . . Before McGraw started giving the signs it used to be the job of the catchers . . . Duke Farrell, Buck Ewing, Jim McGuire, Silver Flint, Mike Kelly and others of those old-time backstops knew the batters like John D. knew his Standard Oil . . . No need of any manager over-riding those babies . . . And pitchers like Matty, Rucker, Alexander, Kid Nichols, Cy Young and Ed Walsh didn't need any help from the catcher.

"HORNSBY ALWAYS WAS interfering with his pitchers . . . 'Signing. Warnecke went all right . . . But with Bush, Malone and Root it was a different thing . . . Then that was a fool trick breaking up the Malone-Hartnett combination . . . That was a great battery, Malone and Hartnett . . . No one who could handle the big pitcher's smoke ball like Gabby . . . Hornsby pulled a bone by bringing on Hemsley from Pittsburgh and making him handle Malone . . . Another thing Hornsby never should have done is to pull Cuyler out of right field . . . That was Cuyler's spot . . . Then think of a base stealer like Kiki having to get permission from Hornsby when to steal! . . . No wonder Cuyler's base-stealing record fell under the Hornsby regime.

"LOOK AT HOW Joe McCarthy handled Hack Wilson . . . And see the kind of ball Hack is playing for Brooklyn under Max Carey . . . He'd be playing better only for the long layoff Hornsby made him take . . . That hurt Hack's morale, fighting spirit and everything else as well as his batting eye . . . Why, if Hornsby had known how to handle Wilson and Danny Taylor the Cubs would have had the pennant sewed up so tight you couldn't snag it from them.

"YOU'LL SEE CUYLER, Root, Malone, Moore, English, all the boys, playing better ball under Grimm . . . And say, there's another Cub pitcher whose light was kept under a bushel basket by Hornsby . . . It's Floyd Herrmann, the sidewheeler from the Coast . . . We ball players know he'll win a lot of games for the Cubs . . . Watch him in the race down the stretch . . . The Cubs have been getting some great pitching, but they'll get even better now . . . 'Go in there and pitch your way,' is all Grimmy tells 'em.

"NO, WE DON'T believe race track gambling had anything to do with Hornsby's departure from the Cubs . . . Landis may use that as an alibi for Rogers going and a wedge to check the gambling and hold public faith in the game . . . But we ball players know that the real reason for giving Hornsby the gate is that he stepped on Billy Veeck's toes in Chicago just as he did on Branch Rickey's in St. Louis . . . None of us ball players shed any tears when Rogers went . . . But the owners would have kept him if he hadn't attempted to run the club owners as well as the club . . . Rogers tried to make a sucker out of Branch Rickey in St. Louis . . . Sam Breadon let him get away with it just so long . . . You can't blame Billy Veeck from rising up on his hind legs and booting Rogers out when Rogers attempted to try the same thing in Chicago . . . Billy's a cantankerous cuss that wants to tend to his own knitting . . . Hornsby tried to do all the thinking for us ball players . . . But it was his tongue that tripped him . . . He called Billy Veeck too many naughty names."

AND THERE YOU have the ball player's viewpoint on Rogers Hornsby and the Hornsby episode. It may be all right. Then again it may be all wrong, Mawruss, all wrong. Right or wrong, Giddyap, Napoleon. Take it away!

By TED SMITS

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (INS)—Darsmen, swimmers, riflemen, gymnasts, fencers, and horsemen girded today for the final supreme effort that will bring the games of the 10th Olympiad to a conclusion amid a blaze of glory.

All competitions will have ended tonight, and tomorrow there remains only the bestowing of medals, a parade of pure-blooded horses, and the impressive closing ceremony, when the great flaming Olympic torch willl be extinguished to be re-lighted in Berlin in 1936.

As the athletes of 38 nations came down the home stretch, the United States pushed its amazing unofficial point total to 650, with Italy safely in second place with 220½. Trailing were France, 135½; Sweden, 141; Finland, 133; Germany, 128; England, 122, and Japan, 99.

ATTENTION DIVIDED

Huge crowds, released by the half holiday, were expected to divide their allegiance today among the equestrian events in the Stadium, the swimming in the Olympic pool and the rowing at Long Beach with a total of 150,000 expected at these contests along with boxing.

At least 35,000 spectators were expected to crowd the stands and shores of the Olympic Lagoon, from start to finish of the 2000-meter straightaway, for the climax event in which University of California's unbeaten crew rows the best boatloads of Great Britain, Canada and Italy for the eight-oared championship of the world.

BEARS NEAR PEAK

The Californians apparently are close to the peak they attained in the final American tryouts, after sweeping the college seas, but they figured to need plenty of pep and stamina to meet Italy's greatest challenge for the International honors since 1924.

The United States fared well Friday along a wide front. The American lacrosse team surprised by taking the third and deciding game of the rubber with Canada, 7 to 5. The sport was included in the Olympic program on an exhibition basis.

George Gulack, broad-shouldered American gymnast, took the individual rings title with a teammate, William Denton, in second place. Romero Neri of Italy won on the parallel bars.

ITALIAN BEST SHOT.

Major Renzo Morigi of Italy showed the way in the pistol shooting competition, with Heinrich Hax of Germany second. The Italian officer revealed his skill in the final frame of the contest when in the space of two seconds he fired six bullets whizzing into the lifesize target.

The first day of rowing, which served as prelude to the mighty contest of the eight-oared shells this afternoon, found Great Britain, England, Australia, and the United States dividing honors.

The best race of the program was the four-oared shell with coxswain. The German crew, closing with a mighty drive, won by inches more than a few feet from Italy, which had led throughout.

W. G. Miller, the American single sculls representative, put up a brave race against "Bobby" Pearce of Australia, the defending champion, but Pearce, without even raising his stroke, kept ahead of the valiant Miller and won by less than a length.

Two United States entries, Carmen Barth of Cleveland, and Edward Flynn of New Orleans, remained in the boxing tournament, finals of which are tonight.

Argentina and Germany each has three men in the finals; Italy and South Africa two each, the other four finalists representing Mexico, Canada, Sweden and Hungary.

JUST THREE GUYS WITH GRIMM POKER FACES

If Judge Landis talked to Charley Grimm (above, left to right) you'll have to guess what they said. Here you see them posing pleasantly, but refusing to say anything further than the judge's pleasant advice to reporters, which was: "Mind your blank, blank business and I'll talk when I'm ready." Just a nice guy, the judge. And that country gentleman you see at the right is Rogers Hornsby, on his Missouri farm, where he is communing with the chickens. Or is he wondering who's going to get the third at Saratoga.

ROBERTSON IS NOW CALLED WONDER MAN

By FRANK G. MENKE

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (INS)—Lawson Robertson of Philadelphia hurdled the barriers of resentment and skepticism concerning his ability as athletic coach, to become something of an idol in these particular parts.

The man who has tutored track and field men at the U. of Pennsylvania almost since his own days as Olympic hero, and who has coached the American Olympic squads in 1924, 1928 and 1932, was not received with any noticeable warmth when he appeared in San Francisco with the Intercollegiate I-A squad, nor was bunting hoisted in his honor when he arrived here to condition the lads for competition against the athletes of the world.

SOME OPPOSED COACH

For no reason that has a logical lilt, Robertson's choice as boss of the American crowd was not regarded with favor by certain folk in California.

Even before the Olympics began, stories were fluttered around the American athletes were stale and overworked, that Robertson was not getting the fullest co-operation. These were fantastic creations, as later events proved.

Robertson inherited men who had gone stale under other coaches who had worked the men to a point of exhaustion. He made them loaf to regain their form.

Giving all that he had, day and night, he took a great number of athletic cogs, fitted them into a machine that annihilated all opposition and won for the U. S. A. more first places than any American ever a long span of years.

And every man in that squad came to love the Scotchman, who has not forgotten that once he was an athlete, that each man's mood is different, that each man's is unlike another, and that, above all else, a whiplash and withering verbal blasts never can bring the best out of a man.

TOLAN PRAISES MENTOR

Those who had come to bid Robertson remained to cheer him, and the tall, solemn gentleman with the whimsical smile, the elaborate sense of dry humor and the everlasting patience won California and all those who had come from adjacent states and saw what wizardry he has accomplished, as chieftain of the squad.

"Never was an athletic boss like Mr. Robertson," was Eddie Tolan's tribute. "When I say that I speak for every boy that was on our team, you know that we respect and admire and love that man. You can't be with him for an hour without seeing in improved athlete and mentality and morally stronger and finer.

"He doesn't snoop around on the boys to see if they are doing what is right. Right in the beginning he says: 'Boys, remember, you are chosen to represent America, that Americans are depending upon you, and I know that none of you will be false to any such trust'."

So What?

—By JOE MOONEY—

Just as race week comes to an end, we get a postcard from one of the scribes: "Here we are at Marblehead, three sheets to the wind."

"Clear weather out in the bay, but here on the verandah we've been in a constant fog all week."

"We all have sore arms, but not from hoisting mainsails."

"All the boats are nice. You should see the beer schooners."

"What kind of a knot do they tie in a pretzel?"

LANDIS HINTS BUT STAYS DECISION

By BILL CORUM

New York, Aug. 13—That fellow, K. M. Landis, the old Virginia judge (One a Day and Live forever), was passing out a tip on a horse called Raggedy Pants in Pittsburgh and he got the wire boys all excited.

The wire boys couldn't seem to find Raggedy Pants in the workout sheets and consequently had no line on him, but they said if he was good enough for Landis he was good enough for them.

Just at this particular time Raggedy Pants is a bad name for a horse. It might tend to make some of us self-conscious, especially if we were standing up. Imagine two guys meeting up in the paddock to exchange views on the race.

"I like Raggedy Pants," one would say.

"I see you do," the other would reply without in the least stretching his imagination.

JUDGE TIPPED MITT

But stick around these races long enough and you'll wind up with a second-hand copy of the Racing Form and Raggedy Pants, whether Landis likes 'em or not.

The judge tipped his mitt on Raggedy Pants in the course of an investigation on race horse gambling among the Chicago Cubs and, I imagine, specifically Rogers Hornsby, their deposed manager. It has been the contention all along that there was something behind Hornsby's unexpected and summary dismissal, and this may be it.

Whenever the Judge takes the spotlight in one of these investigations he is apt to dig in some homely phrase concerning the long apparel. The last time it was shirts.

"Keep your shirt on," he advised Ran Johnson.

This time it is pants. But he never seems to mention hats. Possibly he's a little sensitive on the subject of hats. The way it looks to me he and Queen Mary must have bet they'd wear the same hat until Bryan was elected.

SITUATION ACUTE

"When you have a player out there on the field wondering, during a crucial moment of the ball game, whether Raggedy Pants or some other nag is going to run first or second, the situation becomes acute," says the Judge.

And that's the experience that is nothing much more acute, indeed, than wondering whether Raggedy Pants will last the distance, or if they'll die in the stretch and finish in the rear it's just too bad.

What's far too bad, really is with the Judge exactly 100 per cent net and no discount. But when he continues to chase all over the world around the layout for betting on the horses I have to laugh. I could make quite a lot of people sore with baseball that would fill this column for a week (with their names left in agate type, too), who have played either the horses or the mutuels market, or both, for years. And still are if they haven't run out of chips.

Is there any difference, Judge, in wondering whether Raggedy Pants will finish up the eighth pole, or whether raggedy Goldman-Sachs will go below one and one-half?

You infer that a ball player who has a bet on a race is of little account on the playing field. What about those years in which this same Hornsby was the best ball player in the National League, always from the Jack, and never missed a day having a string of horses out of people's and Uncle's laundry list stuffed in an inside pocket?

NO DEFENSE OF RAI

Now this is neither a defense of Hornsby or the almost universal practice of gambling in some form or other. So far as I know Hornsby needs no defense, and as for betting on the horses they were doing it long before we got here and will be long after we are gone.

I form from experience that you can't beat the horses. In a small and amateurish way I've tried it with little or no success. For all of which it remains my contention that it is as much a man's constitutional privilege to back a horse with his money as it to buy a share of stock or a bond.

SHOW HAND, JUDGE

If the head men of baseball have anything on Hornsby, now would be a good time for them to make it public. If they haven't, now would be a good time for them to cease to crucify him for his indiscreet and innuendo. If there is a rule against those connected with baseball gambling, it should be applied to all forms of gambling and should be a universal rule, applicable to owners, managers, umpires, players and bat boys—not a one-man rule.

Judge Landis says one scandal such as 1919 is enough. Right. So is one O'Connell case enough. For one fellow to take the fall scarcely serves the full ends of justice when you come to think of it. And so I repeat if there is anything to hear, let's hear it, and this time let's hear all of it.

OLYMPIC BROKE ATTENDANCE RECORDS

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (AP)—The 1932 Olympics, which end with the closing ceremonies tomorrow, have far outstripped all records for gate receipts as well as performances.

Unofficial estimates today were that paid attendance would total close to 1,000,000 and gate receipts around $2,000,000 for the most brilliant athletic show ever conducted.

The record-smashing track and field sports accounted for the bulk of these figures. Estimates were that 475,000 cash customers were accommodated in the big Olympic stadium in eight exciting days. Altogether day and night, over the stretch of two weeks, more than 600,000 passed through the main stadium's turnstiles.

Rowing, including an estimate for today's finals, attracted 100,000 to the Marine Stadium at Long Beach, while the aggregate crowds at the swimming championships figured to reach 80,000 today.

Almost from the start there has been no doubt about the all-around supremacy of the United States. The point tables, figured unofficially, gave the Americans with an overwhelming lead.

The United States scored its biggest Olympic conquest in the field sports since the war, captured the free-style wrestling championships and climaxed the meet by honors in women's swimming and hoped to retain the main laurels of the Olympic regatta this afternoon.

TWO AMERICANS IN BOXING FINALS

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (AP)—Eight battle-scarred Olympic boxing survivors of 89 who started international competition last Tuesday, will be crowned tonight.

Two Americans will carry their country's hopes for world's amateur titles. Eddie Flynn of New Orleans studying at Loyola University for a career in dentistry, boxed his way into the last bracket of the welterweight division.

He will meet Erich Campe, German policeman. Flynn outpointed David McCleave of Great Britain, yesterday, while Campe won a decision over Bruno Ahlberg of Finland.

BARTH IN FINALS

Carmen Barth of Cleveland reached the middleweight finals with a decisive win over Ernest Peirce, South Africa, last night. His opponent for tonight, Amador Amo of Argentina, outpointed" Roger Michelot of France.

Other final bouts tonight pair off Francisco Cabanes, Mexico, against Enekes in thef lyweight class; Horace Gwynne, Canada, with Zigliski in the 118-pound group; Josef Schleinkifer, Germany, against Carmelo Robledo, Argentina, in the featherweights; Thure Ahlquist, Sweden, and Lawrence Stevens, South Africa, in the lightweight ranks; Gino Rossi, Italy, and David Carstens, South Africa, light heavyweights, and Santiago Lovell, Argentina, against Rovati in the heavyweight windup.

MARTY MOVES UP IN PILOTS' PERCENTAGE

Not much change in the standings between the old and the new pilots of the Cubs, Red Sox, and Giants today. For the first time Bill Terry is under the .500 mark and that much nearer John McGraw's record with the Giants.

Charlie Grimm's Cubs didn't play yesterday, but Marty McManus moved up a notch when his Red Sox beat the A's, to everyone's surprise and no slight delight.

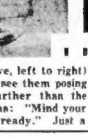
MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

AD ZACHOW, New England middleweight champion, will make his next ring start at a Y. D. boxing show, which will be staged on Aug. 30, with the aid of Eddie Mack's Argonne A. A.

Mack tells me he will try to sign Marcel Thil, French middleweight, to tackle Zachow. Thil has been claiming the middleweight championship since he won from Gorilla Jones on a foul in France. His claim has been generally recognized.



Mr. Boston

In the event Thil will not consent to meet Zachow, Mack will sign the Dover, N. H. youth with some standout middleweight. Zachow's punching power, youth and coolness under fire give him an excellent chance of winning against any middleweight in the world.

I UNDERSTAND that West Springfield is bidding for a ten-round bout between Paul Junior of Portland and Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion. Junior won from Stanley Loayza of Chile. Loayza has a decision to his credit over Canzoneri.

DAN MORGAN AND Billy Gibson probably wish boxing had a Judge Landis in the years when they were in the big money, who would have prevented them from betting on horse races. Morgan and Gibson contributed thousands of dollars to the financial prosperity of the "bookies" at the New York tracks.

THE AVERAGE manager of boxers is a "sucker" when he tries to pick the winners of horse races or ball games. Most of them soon end up in the cleaners. Pete Reilly, manager of Bat Battalino and owner of a "piece" of Max Schmeling, is one of the few men in the boxing game who can keep ahead of the horses. Perhaps this is due to his close association with men who have made a business of playing the horses for years.

I FIND THAT this class of individuals don't play every race. In fact, they will go to the track and often not wager a single dime during an entire afternoon. They wait for the right spot and then take the elastic off their bank rolls. It has been said that Pittsburgh Phil was one of the few men to beat the races over a period of years. His success was due to the fact he only made a few wagers, and then only after he had secured the best possible information.

NOBODY CAN come out ahead betting on horse races if he places a wager on each event. The odds are too great against him.

Mr. John Bananas, or just John Sap to you, tries this disastrous system on his infrequent visits to the race track. As a result, he usually ends up a heavy loser. The smart bettor does not take a chance with his money until he has a choice tip on an important race.

Paging Arlington Nine!

Yale Grid Squad to Report Sept. 15

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 13 — Yale's tentative football plans for next season were today announced and called for a squad of 112 players to report September 15, and to take morning and afternoon practice on Anthony Thompson Field until the opening of the fall term of the university nearly two weeks later.

Yale's heavy losses by graduation include 21 members of last year's varsity squad of 34 players. Of the rumb line which opened the game with Harvard only Captain Wilbur, tackle and Guard Ed Nichols remain.

FAITHFUL CHEAT

By RUBY AYRES

THEY HAD left the shore almost at daybreak; Mrs. Merriman, who had stayed overnight with Sondra, had insisted on everyone's being ready at an entirely unnecessary hour.

"I'm not hungry," Sondra said in answer to Anderson's suggestion. "But we will go if you like."

Sondra drank some coffee but she could not eat.

She sat almost silent, listening to Mrs. Merriman's ceaseless questioning.

"Do you think he will be very ill?—oughtn't we to have brought a doctor? How shall we get him home?"

It was a relief when she left them and wandered outside to see if there was any further news of the boat.

"You haven't eaten anything, Sondra," Anderson said.

"I'm not hungry."

She looked at him with different eyes; he was so calm and understanding and yet—if he loved her he must surely be suffering—just a little.

She said with sudden irrelevance—

"I wonder what's become of Flora? It seems funny she has never written to me."

"What made you suddenly think of her?"

She shrugged her shoulders—

"Perhaps because I want to do what she did—run away from a man I do not love."

He made no answer, and she asked presently:

"I wonder what you are thinking about?"

He smiled a little. "I dare say my thoughts are very much the same as yours, Sondra—perhaps I am wondering why we make such a muddle of our lives."

JOHN HAD EVERYTHING

"You haven't made a muddle of your life," Sondra told John "You've got everything you can possibly want."

He let that pass and after a moment she broke out again.

"I don't know why you bother about us at all. We're not your responsibility."

"I naturally feel an interest in Merriman, seeing that I sent him out. I want to do the best I can for him."

Her mouth quivered, but she answered bitterly, "I'm sure I am very grateful to you—on his behalf."

He leaned his arms on the table looking across at her with steady eyes.

"Sondra, why will you persist in hurting me so? Can't you—can't we both think a little of the poor fellow who is counting the moments till he sees you again? Don't let's be cowardly."

Her eyes flashed angrily. "I don't know why you say 'we'; it's nothing to do with you. I don't want you to carry my troubles, and, anyway, I am a coward! It's the way I've been brought up, I suppose. It's all very well for you to talk. You're free—but I wonder how you would like to be me—tied hand and foot to someone you don't care for?"

"Don't you think I've experienced it? But I've always tried not to forget that it was my own fault."

"I don't see how that helps," she said almost sullenly; she pushed back her chair and rose as Mrs. Merriman came hurrying back to them. "If she asks any more questions I shall scream," Sondra said half hysterically.

MRS. MERRIMAN FLUSHED

Mrs. Merriman was flushed and excited, the boat was sighted, she said to Anderson in a trembling voice. She ignored Sondra. She sped away, a pathetic, anxious figure, and Sondra and Anderson looked at one another silently.

"How she hates me!" Sondra said. "Well, I don't care!" he picked up her coat. "I suppose we must go—" but when he moved she spoke his name, "John!"

"Yes."

"If I can't hear it—if I haven't got the courage—"

"You will have"

She laughed mirthlessly. "You say that because you don't want me any more. I suppose," she said fiercely.

"I suppose you'll marry somebody else and forget all about me."

Anderson said nothing but his face twisted into lines of pain. She made a half movement towards him, then checked herself and together they went out again into the rain.

"All I can say is that you could have knocked me down with a feather," Beatrice Taylor said emphatically. She stirred the iced drink before her slowly, her sharp eyes on Stephen Cassilys face.

Beatrice did not like Cass, but there were occasions when she found him useful because he knew all the tit-bits of scandal which added so greatly to her interest in life.

RAN INTO CASS

She had run into Cass in a restaurant, and had invited herself to an iced drink.

Cass looked a little uncomfortable; he was afraid of Beatrice, she had a disagreeable knack of making him say more than he intended to. He had tried to keep the conversation in ordinary channels, but she had skilfully led it round to the only subject that was interesting her at the moment—Cowdra's marriage.

"You could have knocked me down with a feather—" she said again, lifting the long spoon from the glass and sipping the cool drink.

"I always thought that Sondra was waiting for Mr. Anderson to get his freedom—we all thought so! and then—directly his wife conveniently died Sondra throws a thunderbolt amongst us and says she is Mark Merriman's wife." She looked at Cass searchingly. "I suppose it is the truth?"

To Be Continued Monday.

WANDERER BACK, FINDS AMERICA MAD AND ENTERTAINING

By GILBERT SELDES

GILBERT SELDES

I wonder whether America is the maddest and most entertaining country in the world; or do I think so at this moment because for many weeks I have been away? On the day of my return I read the news-story of a raid on a speakeasy and felt that nothing in the past two months could approach it for sheer cockeyed madness. It appears that when the raiders declared themselves, the proprietor of the speakeasy remained sceptical; I suspect that, having recently paid heavily for protection, he felt that his rights had been flouted and scorned. In any case, he slipped out of the place and telephoned to the police. The police arrived and the raiders, with a show of federal authority, told them not to interfere. Up to this point only the owner of the speak deviated from normal logic.

The raiders announced that they were taking the lawbreakers to the very police station from which the police had come; but they attempted to slip away; they began offering to square the whole thing for a consideration. Then the police acted; a fight followed; and when the raiders were arrested, for impersonating federal officers and for attempted extortion, it was discovered that one of them was a policeman—off duty.

One Officer Can't Make Fortune

It is good news that one policeman, at least, cannot make a fortune while on duty. Perhaps there are several thousand like him, and that is the only one who is so enamored of law enforcement that, after having patrolled and warmed and smiled all day in uniform, he slips into mufti for a little more, and more profitable, enforcement at night. But the unforgettable event is the phone call of the speakeasy man who has taught us that in America all you need, to be protected in lawbreaking, is to call up the police.

It is a comfort to be home and no August heats can spoil your delight. It is pleasant to get today's news in today's newspaper, and fit is agreeable to talk in your own tongue to people who are more or less certain to understand you. There is always a little strain in communicating with strangers and—one of the minute secret pleasures of travel—there is always the chance that something surprising may result from your ignorance or from the obstinacy of your opponent. (At Linkoping, in Sweden, I called for the bill of fare after the soup, and got the bill for my meal, and nothing could persuade the waitress that she wasn't doing the most normal thing in the world.)

All travelers enjoy the sensation of coming home; but none, except Americans, record the sense of excitement. Englishmen grow tender and relaxed as they approach their native shores; Germans, I am told, grow sentimental; Swedes are heartily glad to be back; but Americans have a feeling of tremendous energies around them; quite apart from their personal pleasure in seeing old friends and going to old or new speakeasies, they feel a liveliness in the air, a pang of hunger to get out and around and be active. I understand that certain Europeans think all this a fault in us. They may be right, but I think it's wonderful.

Welcomed Home With Stock Boom

Of course, coming home in a bull market is a bit of luck, and the gratification would be even greater if something could be done to prevent the newspapers from printing news. The sinister word "backlog" appears in every industrial report; significantly: If I understand it, that the unfilled orders of steel, for example, have reached a new low precisely on the day that stocks have reached a new high. (A new high since July 1 to be sure; but high enough for all practical purposes and for all electioneering purposes.) Obviously we have our choice: to shut down the stock market or to shut down our industries. For they seem bent on not running in the same direction.

A correspondent complained, a few weeks ago, of road-signs which made jokes and rather pointless wisecracks. Part of his irritation, I suppose, came from feeling that a sign ought to be a sign and something, whereas these were signs only of a feeble mind. John Stock, of Tillson, New York, has seen and reports another series which begins with "Superstitious Ahead." At intervals you see a black, backarched cat, or a witch with a broomstick, and legends like:

"Wearing Opals"
"Friday the 13th"
"Breaking a Mirror!"
"Seating 13 persons at Table!"

These signs existed last year; this year they have vanished. The whole thing remains a mystery.

Yet good from evil comes and the same idea has been used by Roger Babson who, in the neighborhood of the laboratory of John Hays Hammond, Jr., on Cape Ann, near Gloucester, Mass., has been publicly advising the passerby to "Be Clean." Soft drinks "Save" and "Help Mother." He has even added a note of hope and faith to these commands, for one advertisement calmly assures us that "Prosperity Follows Service," the implication of which is that the people of the United States have not been giving service in the past three years and are being punished for it.

Mr. Babson says that young people "when outdoors should see something besides advertisements." There is always scenery.

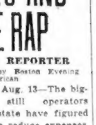
BOYS RUN GANG STILLS AND TAKE RAP

By MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1932, by Boston Evening American

Tiverton, R. I., Aug. 13—The big-hearted rum still operators throughout this state have figured out a new way to reduce expenses. They are hiring small boys at $1 per day to run their stills and, what's more important, take the rap when the federal dry agents pull a raid.

In a dark cellar in the Bear's den section of Tiverton, a stone's throw from the Fall River line, I saw two 16-year-old boys cowering in a corner while federal agents wrecked two great stills and confiscated 1000 gallons of mash and 300 gallons of moonshine.



The lads gave their names as Edward Madeiros of Wellcome st., Fall River, and Manuel Silva of Riverside ave., Somerset. Silva had a racking cough. Masked Reporter and looked undecided. He told me he went to work in the cellar at daybreak each day and worked till dark. Madeiros, stolen at first gradually weakened and told me how he walked several miles to and from his home each day to help Silva work the mash and drain the stills.

The boys, they said, gave them each $1 every day, but who the boss was they would not say. Federal Agents Frank Gray and William McGinchey of Providence questioned them as to the identity, but they were speechless. They seemed terrified by the mere thought of mentioning his name.

SOLD BY CHILDREN

The agents promised they would not be arrested if they told the name of the still owner, but after dark, when I left the cold, wet cellar that reeked of stale moonshine, they hadn't "squawked." Gray told me that it was becoming a common thing in Rhode Island to find boys and even young girls working at stills after running the liquor to cheap speakeasies and pint sellers in the tenement districts of this and other towns.

It was only a few weeks ago that Mary Freitas, 16-year-old Newport girl, was stopped for speeding by State troopers in Tiverton. In the rear of the car were found three 10-gallon cans of alcohol.

Mary refused to talk about the stuff, wouldn't say who owned it, and she was placed on probation.

WORKER TAKES "RAP"

"When a still owner hires an adult to run a still," one of the agents explained, "he usually pays about $50 per week, with the understanding that if the place is raided the employe takes the rap. If he's lucky enough to get off with a suspended sentence, he sometimes pay it. If he is sentenced to jail, he's just out of luck. He serves his time and the boss forgets all about him.

"They felt they couldn't continue the $50 a week wage. No adult cares to work for less and take the gamble of going to jail. So the still bosses go out and hire kids, train them in the simple method of still operation and pay them not more than $1 per day. Most of the kids are glad to get even that much. I'll make a bet that you won't stay in this cellar up to your neck in mash and moonshine for $50 a day."

Until I met across the story of the kids I had planned to discuss at length the varied career of "Goofy" Kirby, of Jersey, who is doing no less than life probation for assault with intent to murder in connection with a hi-jacking battle in which Alvah Richardson, onetime chief raiding officer of the Rhode Island dry agents, led the hi-jackers in a phony raid on the Horatio Hart farm in this bizarre town.

"Goofy" ran the gamut of crimes. He started as a wholesale alcohol dealer, turned hi-jacker and is now engaged in some other pursuit.

WORKED WITH RAIDERS

But before he settled down to his present occupation he took a fling at stool-pigeoning for the Coast Guard. In other words, "Goofy" agreed to "finger" the drops or landing places of rumrunners just for the good of the country. Records show that he "fingered" several drops but the Coast Guard found out a long time after, then it was "Goofy" worked the "finger" only because the users of these particular drops had refused to turn off when he told them of his job with the Coast Guard.

In Monday's Boston Evening American the Masked Reporter will tell how the boys in Barnstable and Plymouth counties on Cape Cod syndicate to force the transfer of the present dry raiding squad now operating in that island. How bootleggers, speakeasy owners and rum-runners in this section are being solicited for election campaign funds.

Los Angeles, Aug. 13 (UP)—Settlement of the $5000 damages awarded Myrtle St. Pierre by a jury for breach of promise was suggested by attorneys for David "Baby Boy" Hutton after Superior Judge Ira W. Roth denied them a new trial.

Miss St. Pierre's lawyers, however, indicated they would attempt to collect the full amount.

Financial Market News and Comment

SPECTATOR Says:

The need of caution this column has been stressing for the last two days was amply borne out by the market's nosedive. Both stocks and commodities had become topheavy following the revival of speculative enthusiasm. The break will serve to clear this up and bring a healthier tone to the market.

Stop Loss Orders

These should be more selling early today after which support and possibly a rally, should appear on all declines advisable, however, to stand aside until next week to see how the situation shapes up.

The speed with which stocks went down and the heavy volume indicated that stop loss orders were being touched off all along the line.

Shrewd investors are inclined to look for a trading range now with the top around 70 on the industrial averages.

There is an enormous amount of resistance at this level on the charts since the market established triple bottoms there before it went through this year . . . .

Help From Trade

It is logical to expect that business will have to come along and lend a hand if stocks are to pull through and make the widely-predicted 100 per cent recovery.

It would now appear that the market will keep more in line with trade developments from now on.

One thing to remember, though, is that stocks are still in a bullish trend . . . whatever at this time does not mean that the price is to raise the price level being made by bankers and the administration have been shortsighted . . . And it is still a good thing not to play the short side, for stocks are moving very fast.

TODAY'S NEWS OF WALL ST. LEADERS

OUT OF the welter of ballyhoo and stock market speculation this week arises one constructive development—the advance in bond prices. For on strength in the bond market rests the solvency of the insurance companies and banks.

Solvency of these institutions means more to the average individual and the general welfare of the country than a manipulated stock market advance, or even a spurt in commodity prices.

New Short Position In General Motors

A leading professional is said to have built up a new short position in General Motors the last few days.

American Smelters Position in Silver

Revived speculation in American Smelters grows out of the sudden boom in silver futures prices, according to competent trade sources. It is being pointed out in this connection that the company has little production of silver as part of its operations in copper, during the last two years Smelters has written off large sums against depreciated value of its investment.

The rise in silver therefore is calculated to be of immense importance to its large silver supplies and earnings on sales of the metal above lower quotations. Last year the last published balance sheet adjustments.

Coming Dividend Events Important

Major meetings included in next week's dividend list marks the period as one of the most important of the trading year in point of time. Approach of these events and the uncertainty surrounding some of them has undoubtedly had a tendency to other speculative enthusiasm of late.

STOCKS CLOSE OFF SLIGHTLY IN WALL ST.

New York, Aug. 13—Important shares closed off slightly in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. Up to the last few minutes the ticker showed early setbacks recovered and gains of fractions to a point over the previous close but selling was resumed in the final dealings.

BACKWASH OF SELLING

The market ran into a backwash of selling late in the afternoon, in the second hour, and a number of issues were carried down about 1 to 3 points, but there was no even sharper losses of the previous session. The further losses were soon attributed to short covering under the influence of short covering and fresh buying in the last hour until near the close.

Trading was moderate] active. The market dipped partly in sympathy with a lower opening in wheat. Some commodities improved later.

The tally for the day showed 125 stocks closing higher, 249 closing off and 108 finishing unchanged. Total sales approximated 1,750,000.

COTTON CLOSES HIGHER

Cotton futures closed very steadily up 13 to 15 points.

Among issues closing about a point lower were General Motors, Baltimore & Ohio, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, and others. Allied Chemical, after selling off 5, closed 1 net. Du Pont, particularly after dropping 5½, rallied about 4 from the bottom. American Telephone sold off 3, then came back 2 from the bottom.

U. S. Steel closed off a fraction from the preferred was up a point. Stone & Webster was up a major fraction, and other issues up slightly. The Chalk included American Smelting, Anaconda, Bethlehem, and Proctor and Gamble.

Farm implements continued to fluctuate widely. Case, which lost 13¾ a week ago, rallied 4 on the early trading, rallied to show a gain of more than a point, then closed 2 net. Deere was off 1 at the lower. International Harvester lost more than 2 at the bottom, but rallied only a fraction from there to net support after an opening sag.

Despite the widespread improvement in business sentiment, the weight of selling, after our findings, as did earlier statistical evidences of the week, failed to divert the trend of prices in basic conditions. Freight car loading for the week ended Aug. 6 were reported as 30,000 cars less than cars from the previous week and more than cancelling the gain of 9057 reported for that week.

Construction Off to $22,000,000 Total

Heavy engineering construction contracts reported for the week ending August 4 total $22,000,000, a loss of 2 per cent from the average of the past six weeks according to Engineering News-Record and 7 per cent from the past week's volume is caused by a lack of large single contracts, according to the report. The $1,000,000 instead of the usual half dozen or more.

Cumulative contracts from the first of the year to date total $765,813,000, as compared with $1,715,709,000 for the same period last year.

Boston Exchange Seat Transferred

First National Bank has been appointed Boston registrar for the preferred and common stocks of Cities Service Refining.

Utilities Hydro & Rail Shares Corp. will act as transfer agent in Boston for transfer of its common stock.

Century Ribbon Has Loss in Half-Year

Century Ribbon Mills reports a net loss of $25,420 for the first half of this year after depreciation and federal taxes, as against a net profit of $102,915, equal after dividend requirements on the 7 per cent preferred to 60 cents a share on 100,000 common shares in the first half of 1931.

June quarter net loss was $57,451 after charges and taxes, as against a net profit of $32,014, or 13 cents a common share, in the preceding quarter and a net profit of $66,747, or 44 cents a common share, in the June quarter of 1931.

JUST LIKE A WOMAN

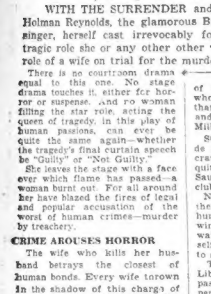
Libby Holman, the Broadway Beauty, in Tragic Role of Murderer of Husband

By Margaret Mooers Marshall

WITH THE SURRENDER and release on bail of Libby Holman Reynolds, the glamorous Broadway beauty and torch singer, herself cast irrevocably for the most tremendously tragic role she or any other other woman can ever play—the role of a wife on trial for the murder of her husband.



There is no courtroom drama equal to this one. No stage drama touches it, either for horror or suspense. And no woman filling the star role, acting the queen of tragedy in this play of human passions, can ever be quite the same again—whether the tragedy's final curtain speech be "Guilty" or "Not Guilty."

She leaves the stage with a face over which flame has passed—a woman burnt out. For all around her have blazed the fires of legal and popular accusation of the worst of human crimes—murder by treachery.

CRIME AROUSES HORROR

The wife who kills her husband betrays the closest of human bonds. Every wife known in the shadow of this charge of murderous disloyalty arouses the horror and antagonism hanging about the name that Judas who betrayed the Son of Man with a kiss.

Human nature, however, hardened to crimes of violence, still shrinks away from the man or woman who must make Othello's awful avowal:

"I kissed you—then I killed you."

Guilty or innocent, the woman tried for the murder of her husband must feel as if she were being burned at the stake. And she looks it.

HAD TO STUDY

We have had to study, for hours, the faces of three wives of murdered men as they sat in the prisoners' dock and all New York hung shuddering upon their fate.

One was the suburban Lady Macbeth, Ruth Snyder, electrocuted at Sing Sing with her lover, Judd Grey.

One before was Frances Noel Hall, elderly and dignified widow of the New Jersey clergyman, whose murdered body lay beside that of the choir singer and sweetheart, Mrs. Florence Mills.

Still farther back came Blanca de Saulles, beautiful and aristocratic young South American, acquitted for shooting Jack de Saulles, the popular New York clubman whom she married.

No matter what your opinion of the three women, if you had any human sympathy at all you winced and shivered as you watched them. You said to yourself, "Nothing that can happen to any woman is worse than this."

Through such a trial by ordeal, Libby Holman Reynolds must pass. And what shattering experiences have led up to this ultimate tragedy! From what a zenith of triumph to what a nadir of desolation she has fallen!

Beauty, youth, talent, fame, wealth, love—she had them all. A marvellously disturbing beauty of eyes darkly passionate, heavy lips, honey colored skin; a hurting beauty of voice that sang of heartbreak, "moanin' low."

TRAGEDY OF DOUBT

Beauty plus youthful vitality and limelit glamour, that drew irresistibly the poor little rich boy, the neurotic playboy, Smith Reynolds, heir to $15,000,000.

He flung love and wealth and the world at the little dancing feet he worshipped. Even when his gifts were accepted, and Libby married him, he could not believe in his own good fortune. He doubted, despaired, trembled —and that is when his tragedy and the tragedy of Libby Holman began.

She told at the inquest the terrible story which undoubtedly she will tell again at her trial—told how her boy husband wept for his weakness in her arms, how he craved the constant physical reassurance of her caresses. She told at last, in words, like bleeding wounds, her story of that night of death in Winston-Salem:

"I remember seeing Smith, the gun in his hand—that frightful, horrible expression. I remember that over and over. I remember him falling over me—warm blood raining on me. Warm blood running over me."

HER TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

Even if she has no darker memory, does it seem strange that this should shatter her, physically, mentally and spiritually? If, too, another life is growing within her—as according to her father's and her attorney's story, which ranges itself so strangely beside another told at the inquest by the expectant mother herself—if Libby Holman bears the triple burden of tragic accusation, of tragic recollection, of new life springing from tragedy—can any imagination conceive of a more piteously suffering figure?

Here are drama more intense and poignant than the playwrights of her Broadway would ever dare to offer—and she holds the center of the stage as the curtain goes up.

When the curtain falls, how will the play have ended?

Neck Wrinkles Detract From Face Beauty

BE CONCERNED about the condition of your neck, Madame Beauty Quester! If a nice neck suddenly loses beauty, takes upon itself creases and fiddle strings, it is not easily reformed. When giving the complexion its nightly allotment of cream, flip a dozen firm strokes on the throat with fingers that spread on the emollient. Top the cream in front of the ears. Early wrinkles pick those spots out as pleasant occasions for permanent residence.

LOOKING for short cuts to the beauteous and perfect appearance is rainbow chasing. The wise gal travels straight along the path of health and hygiene, getting to bed early every night, eating foods that the digestive organs find agreeable, getting her daily exercise, keeping a lesh on emotional outbursts, paying strict regard to bathing. These three little matters are the fundamentals of good appearance. If she enjoys playing tricks with eyebrows, pencils, cheek glows and all that, well and good. But she must remember that they are only temporary props, while health is an insurance against the ravages of time.

WHEN THE WOMAN with salt and pepper hair has an urge to apply a henna pack, it is well for her to realize that dark and white threads won't emerge from the treatment with matching shades. The dark hairs will redden slightly. White ones may be a golden red, sometimes a carrot shade. This condition comes from the first application. Following treatments will impart deeper red tones to the snowy portions of the topknot.

Tasty Clam Chowder of N. E.

By MARTHA LEE

"DO HURRY up with that recipe for the clam chowder"—the demand comes from the proprietress of a wayside stand a little below Falmouth. "I'm serving your clam fritters and fried clams, with a lot of profit to me and credit to you, and I do want to improve my clam chowder."

The credit goes, not to me, dear lady, but to the pioneer Pilgrim mothers, probably right around Plymouth who devised the first New England clam chowder. Since then, more than 57 varieties of this famous dish have been foisted on the credulous, fresh coast to coast. I'll forgive—and even like—clam chowder made with tomatoes and corn, but the shades of New England forefathers certainly rise with protest against clam chowder that boasts not only onions potatoes, and clams, but carrots stewed tomatoes and thyme.

CLAM CHOWDER I

1 qt. shelled clams
1 cup cold water
¼ cup diced salt pork
3 small onions, sliced
4 cups potatoes, cut in ½ inch pieces
2 tbsps. flour
2 tsps. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
2½ cups boiling water
1 qt. scalded milk.
Common crackers
2 tbsps. butter

Pour the cold water over the clams to cleanse them. Then strain them through fine cheesecloth reserving the liquor. Separate the hard part from the clams and chop fine. Cook the pork in a kettle until golden brown. Add the sliced onions and continue cooking until they are tender. Then add the potatoes, hard part of clams, reserved clam liquor and boiling water; cover and cook until the potatoes are nearly tender. Then add the tomato juice, soda, salt, pepper and milk. Heat well and serve with or without common crackers. Serves 6 to 8.

CLAM BROTH

Scrub the shells of ½ peck of clams free of sand and dirt, and rinse in several waters. Then place in a kettle with cold water to cover. Cover tightly, bring to the boiling point, lower the heat, and let simmer from 1 to 2 hours, depending upon the strength of broth desired. Strain through fine cheesecloth and serve topped with salted whipped cream. While this method the clam broth has a very concentrated flavor.

The Latest in Fashions

WE MUST have our printed frocks if we have to spend summer in town. Grand for informal dining is a frock of printed crepe de chine. The flowers of pomegranate red are printed on a light pink-beige ground and there is a touch of brush of the deeper color with long loops and one long end.

ALL THE TIME now there will be word of the frocks with sashes, the sashes having three loops and long ends. A frock of dull white velvet, prepared for early autumn wear, has such a sash in sky blue velvet. The accompanying wrap is of white velvet with matching blue ostrich. The sash loops and ends are placed at the back of the dress, but sometimes they are worn in front.

The Marry-Go-Round

Mrs. Solomon Says—

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY DAUGHTER, hear now the Miserere of a Summertime Cynic.

Verily, verily, what joy hath a woman in all her mid-summer diversions and her pursuit of merriment, sun tan and the elusive male?

For, behold, a summer resort is a place where a damsel will resort to ANYTHING for amusement, and where a man will resort to anything for an escape from boredom.

Lo, one man arriveth, and another departeth; yet there are never enough dance partners to go around, and unattached men are scarcer than pearls in the oysters.

The seeker after beauty courteth the actinic rays; but while the back acquires a beautiful tan, the nose taketh on the hue of the rose; and while the knees are browning, the shoulders are peeling.

Ears have returned to view and waistlines are in vogue again; but the reducing diet still mortifyeth the flesh, and the baths to keep down the hips is as tireless as ever.

The week-end arriveth, and, lo, the bachelors and the summer widowers come down from the city and gladden the hearts of the women. But, alas, upon Monday morning all these shall depart—and what profit hath a damsel in all her vamping?

• • •

The summer bungalow offereth a retreat from the world. But the world soon beateth a path to its door—and of the finding of guest towels and feeding of the play seekers there is no end!

The widows and matrons set snares for the young and eligible men; and the flappers must be content with the middle-aged and ineligible. The blondes live in fear of fading hair and freckles—and the brunettes live in the fear of the blondes!

• • •

Go to, go to! In the spring all things seemed NEW and promising. But by mid-August all is ennui and tedium and lassitude.

THE BRUNETTES LIVE IN THE FEAR OF THE BLONDES

One woman's bathing suit is as faded as another's, and one man's line is as tiiresome as another's.

One man's chin is as rough as another's, and one man's lies are as smooth as another's.

One man's kisses are as automatic as another's, and one man's alibis are as old as another's.

• • •

And there is no thrill under the sun save the gladsome thought that the gay vacation days will soon be OVER.

Suggestions to Housewives

BREAKFAST DISH—Soak bread overnight, squeeze out water, and to each cupful add one egg and salt and pepper. Beat well together, and fry in rounds in bacon fat until a light brown. Serve with bacon.

WHEN CLEANING tennis shoes, moisten the pipe-clay with milk instead of water. This hint is also useful for baby's white shoes, as the pipe-clay does not rub off on to the clothes of anyone who carries the child.

IN NUMBERS of cases where children are weak, nervous and debilitated, a diet of raw vegetables, lightly-cooked eggs and brown bread and butter, and fresh fruit and milk will restore them to perfect health and bring color to their cheeks.

Daily True Story: 'In the Fog'

FOR NEARLY thirty years Captain Wilmot had been operating the ferry between the landing and Bluff Island.

It was during the summer that Margaret Lane came back for a visit to Bluff Island, where she had been born.

"It sure is good to see you again," Captain Wilmot, who had known her since she was a child, told her. "What's this I hear about you gettin engaged to a fellow down in the city? Ain't the boys up here good enough for you?"

A FOOLISH QUARREL

"Of course they are, Cap'n" Margaret replied. "But you know things don't work out that way. And I know you'll like him. The man I'm engaged to, I mean. He's coming up next month."

When Cap'n Wilmot met John Parran he did like him.

"I'm glad it's a sunny day," Margaret told the skipper. "John wouldn't like creeping around in this old boat if it were foggy."

"Fog—what's a little fog?" answered Cap'n Wilmot.

A week later a foolish quarrel threatened to disrupt the young couple's holiday. John, as was natural, wanted Margaret to himself all the time, while she found it necessary to devote some of her time to old friends. The break came over a picnic that had been planned.

"You can go, but I'm not going," said John. "I didn't come up here to see these other people. I came to see you."

"Please don't be foolish," Margaret replied. "I can't get out of it. They expect me to go. They're just trying to be nice to us."

"Suit yourself," answered John. "But I'm not going."

"Suit yourself," said Margaret. "You know when the ferry runs."

John knew he would be sorry later, but not anger decided him. He began packing up to leave. Margaret spent a miserable day at the picnic.

"I have a headache," she pleaded and left early.

John was waiting for her on her return, and the first moment they were alone he apologized.

"I intended to go," he said. "But when I got to the ferry Cap'n Wilmot began asking me why I was going back so early and I told him about your going off on the picnic."

"But what stoped you?" asked Margaret.

"The fog," John answered. "The water was covered with fog. You couldn't see a hundred feet. Cap'n Wilmot said it was too dangerous to make the trip, and then I realized what a fool I had been and came on back."

MARGARET EXPLAINS

It wasn't until later, after she had talked with Cap'n Wilmot, that Margaret told him.

"Don't you ever tell anybody that Cap'n Wilmot was afraid to go out in the fog," she warned him.

"But he was," said John, Margaret laughed.

"Why," she said, "Cap'n Wilmot has made that crossing so often he can do it blind-folded. He never lets the fog stop him. He just did that to keep you from running away. As soon as you went back he started the ferry."

"Well," said John, "there's one thing certain. I'm going to invite him to the wedding."

Phone Him to Call, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young high school girl. I like a certain boy quite well. I want to invite him to our house to call. Do you think this is suitable for me? Mother says "Yes." Please tell me how I should invite him.

Dear H. E: It would be all right to phone him and ask him to call. As mother is agreeable, why not ask her to let you invite him. Or Sunday night supper which is a pleasant informal meal and easy to get? Or you might invite two other young people and have a game of cards.

Her Family Doesn't Like Him

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of 20 and have been going with a girl of 19 for the past two years. As her family has no use for me, we planned to elope and get married and keep it a secret, but we have changed our minds now. We've decided to wait, but she happens to be doing a little "cheating," and I've told her it must stop. She promises, but still continues to cheat, so now I'm undecided if I should marry her, or part with her.

JERRY.

Dear Jerry: "Cheating" is not a good foundation on which to build a happy marriage, do you think, my dear Jerry? Love, confidence and respect are all requisites for a life partnership. And what do you mean by "cheating"; something serious, or just a little flirting with another boy? I find you young people call both these things "cheating." And as you're both very young, and the girl's family doesn't approve of you, it would be better not to consider marrying just yet.

BLONDIE of the FOLLIES

From Which M-G-M Has Made a Glamorous Picture Starring Marion Davies

By Frances Marion

"SURE . . . what's wrong with that?"

"Nothing—nothing—but come here a moment," and he moved to the other end of the room, Blondie following him.

"Now, Pa, don't start," said Blondie, defensively.

"I'm not going to start—I've finished." There was no force in his statement. He said it quietly, brokenly.

"Not with me, Pa!" Blondie was frightened now.

"No, Blondie, I'll never be finished with you—never," her father said, looking at her sadly. "What I meant was, I'd finished with being an old-time Pa . . . I thought it over carefully, and a parent has no right to try and hold a child back from doing what she wants—unless she wants to do something very wrong—and you couldn't do anything very wrong, could you, Blondie?"

"You know I couldn't," said Blondie, softly. Then quickly on the defensive again: "The Follies is all right then—they pay well."

"Where will . . . you live?"

"Here for the time being—Lottie said I could."

"You—you couldn't go in the Follies and still live—home?" her father asked pleadingly.

"No—no, its such a long way uptown at night—I'll come and see you all the time, though . . ."

"We'll send your things down here—or will you come up for them?" he asked hopefully.

SHE'S A PAL

"I won't need anything from there," Blondie said quickly. "Lottie said she'd lend me everything. Isn't she a pal?"

"Yes . . . well, then . . . good luck, Blondie." And Pa looked down at his twirling hat.

"Anyone would think I was going away forever. Aren't you glad?" said Blondie, trying to be cheerful.

"Yes—it's fine—it is fine," her father said, almost hysterically. "Blondie, I'm just an old crab—I don't mean to be—it's real fine, really it is."

His eyes filled up with tears and he flung his arms around her. Then he sobbed:

"Take care of my girl . . . Oh, take care of my baby."

He pushed Blondie away and put on his little hat.

"I'll see you, Blondie—it is fine . . . it's fine," he said.

He almost ran out of the apartment.

For several seconds Blondie stood looking at the door that closed behind her father. Then she slowly sank back to the bedroom davenport.

Lurline was still propped up in bed eating, when Blondie entered.

"O'Brien came to see me, late," Lurline said, knowing that whatever answer Blondie made would determine what had happened at the meeting with her father.

ON HER WAY

"I'm on my way now," Blondie said as slipping out of the dressing gown.

Lurline pushed her tray aside and jumped out of bed. Going over to the closet she took a dress from the rack.

"Here, take that blue . . . you can wear it . . . and the practice pants . . . here they are. Madelon can pull the initials off."

"You're certainly a pal!" said Blondie enthusiastically.

Lurline turned to her and said affectionately: "I like you, Blondie . . . I'm glad to have you for a pal again. One sort of feels at home . . . you know . . . the only thing is . . . hands off the Larry number."

"You promised you, didn't I?" said Blondie sincerely.

"I'm going on a yacht tonight," said Lurline. "Pratt, the old man's yacht. It's a palace . . . a palace on the sea . . ."

"Fine . . . yes, fine," Blondie answered, but there was a hollow ring in her voice.

"If I had another good fur coat I'd lend it to you and take you along . . ."

"The coat you gave me last night's right here. Do you have to have furs on a yacht?"

FURS ON A YACHT

"On a yacht! Certainly! You ried it for deck work," said Lurline wisely.

"Deck work? What's that"

"Go on a yacht, baby, and you'll see!"

When Lurline referred to Mortimer Pratt's yacht as "a palace on the sea," she was nearer right than she knew. From bow to stern, from engine room to the wireless antenna, the yacht was the final word in seagoing luxury.

Tonight its modern beauty was heightened by the colorfulness of little lamps on deck, gaily swaying, the arrival of all guests who were to make up the memorable cruise. Soft music floated up from the massive salon below and drifted out to sea, mingled with gay voices and laughter.

Leaning carelessly against the rail near the accommodation ladder Pratt and Pratt spoke together.

"I asked Lurline for you," said Pratt, hospitably.

"You mustn't have done that," replied Larry, in a noncommittal tone.

A GOOD-LOOKER

"She's a good looker that girl—not quite my type—but stunning." Pratt looked at Larry questioningly.

"That's a funny situation" said Larry, lowering his voice confidentially. "I don't know how I got into it . . . It's just one of those things . . . you know what I mean?"

"Not quite," said Pratt, recalling what he had seen and heard.

"I never really cared about her," Larry explained," . . . but we're cads, a of us. We think because we're able to help these olds out with a few luxuries we're emperors by divine right."

"The man pays."

"Yes . . . and so do the girls.

I've been trying as tactfully and nicely as I know how to bust this thing up . . . but it's every difficult."

"Give her a good check and tell her . . ."

"I'd hate to hurt her."

"I like blondes," and Pratt said it as though expressing his preference for dogs or horses.

"I'm beginning to want the decent things . . . it must be the age . . . something for whom you can have some respect."

"Better watch your step . . . you're getting that marriage look. It's like a cold in the head —everyone gets it."

"I'd hate to feel that I'd harmed a girl."

"Harmed her? Why you've probably given her what they all want most."

"What?"

"Clothes, a car, style, education."

SILLY WARD

"But nothing for her soul!" Larry said sadly.

"That's a very silly word . . . she probably hasn't one. They usually throw that impediment to fun out the window when they all need apartment they possess."

"Cynic."

"No—a man of the world!" Pratt bragged.

"Which world?"

"Venus."

As Pratt spoke several searchlights on the yacht started to play across the water toward the shore, cutting huge paths of light through the darkness.

"Here comes some of the girls," said Pratt, reaching for the binoculars hanging from the strap around his neck. "Lurline's bringing a friend tonight—someone special for me," he added.

"That's nice of her," said Larry disinterestedly.

"Lurline's a nice girl—not quite my type—but a very nice," and Pratt was overly patronizing. "Put the searchlights on the tender!" he shouted.

At the older Larry glanced off to where the lights concentrated but the tender was too far away for him to distinguish any of the passengers.

Larry watched the approaching tender attentively. Other guests joined him at the rail as the little boat drew closer. Finally there was a small figure in the bow of yachters, plainly visible now, and Larry saw that Blondie was with Lurline in the boat. He walked hastily away from the ladder.

Better Spray Fly Than to Swat Him

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

FLIES have been known to mankind through all time, but it is only within the last 30 years that medical science discovered them to be carriers of fore this discovery flies flies were a nuisance, of course, but chiefly were regarded as harmless and were permitted to breed in enormous numbers. This was excusable when no one suspected the relationships between flies and disease. It is not excusable today, but unfortunately many still tolerate flies and do not seem to realize the dangers of these insects.

Science has decided that the fly may possibly transmit the germs of more than 100 diseases. Typhoid fever, diarrhea and other summer complaints are thought to be caused by the fly, and though not definitely proved, many authorities believe the germs of infantile paralysis are carried by the fly.

However, should enlist in the war against the fly, for the menace cannot be successfully combated unless everybody cooperates.

Cleanliness is the password in this campaign. Filth and decomposed organic matter, such as garbage, must be carefully disposed of or screened from flies. All garbage pails should be scoured and kept covered. Porches, windows and doorways should be screened throughout the summer months. In spite of these precautions, flies may enter the house through open doors, and these must be destroyed.

There are many forms of destroying the fly, but after careful study it has been found that a powdered spray is the most efficient and sanitary method. The sprays used must be harmless to humans and to animal life, but capable of destroying insects.

If you rid the home of flies you are guarding against many undesirable diseases. Protect your health and the health of your family by a determined campaign against this old and often overlooked menace to health.

UNVEILING BROADCAST

By N. F. T.

A fitting Sabbath radio offering is scheduled over nation-wide networks of NBC and CBS tomorrow when the broadcast of ceremonies attending the unveiling of the memorial to James Cardinal Gibbons, noted Catholic prelate, take place at Washington, D. C. This solemn function graces radio waves between 4:30 and 5:30 in the afternoon, and comes to New England via WEEI and WNAC facilities.

PUSHES UP POWER

Last night marked the beginning of a gala 41-hour broadcast from WBT of Charlotte, N. C. Said station is the key studio in Dixie for Columbia Broadcasting System programs. • • •

Those big game hunters, who do most of their shooting with movie cameras, meaning Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, are taking a "mike" turn tomorrow night (WNAC at 10 p. m.). Both hold forth in a radio dramatization based on one of their most thrilling African jungle experiences. Comic Bert Lahr lends a touch of humor on the side.

Nancy Garner, very attractive and talented niece of the Democratic vice-presidential candidate, is a frequent guest star on NBC. Nancy will be guest artist with Paul Whiteman tomorrow night (WBZ at 9 p. m.). "Girl of Dash" puts on his weekly rhythm concert from 6 to 7 o'clock.

LOCAL LATHER

A last minute flash just brought word about WHDH furnishing listeners with yacht race descriptions from off Marblehead today at 4 o'clock . . . As things shape up now, it doesn't seem likely that Emerson Gill and his orchestra at Norumbega Park, will be paid a visit by the "Magic Carpet" hour pilots who were planning to fly to Pacific coast to coasting next Thursday night . . . Some discussion dealing with $1300 appropriation gummed the works temporarily. Everything may happen as per original plan at that, providing whatever the difficulty can be settled in time . . . Those four chappies due tonight (WEEI at 7:15 and called "Collegians," are South Boston products named Joe Purcell, George Jackson, Eddie Jones and "Bunny" Hamilton . . . Alert NBC Artist Bureau scouts are found keeping an eagle eye and a few sets of ears open for them lately . . . Beatrice, Clara and Eda were given as first names to three local girls billed last night (WEEI) at 7:15 as The Prim Sisters. These gals are another promising harmony combination from which there are due to hear considerable this fall . . . Somehow one name leads to another . . . On Saturdays WAAB, in fit accidentally becomes known that a singing lass, popular for a long while here-about, has been Ruth Chilton to nearly everyone except her mother. Ma knows Pearson to be said songbird's name . . . Charlie (WEEI) Burton is vacationing in Vermont, hard by the old St. Lawrence. He probably never will find that swell stream every day, but if so how does he get back? Huh tzno! Billy Hinsdale was talked about at length in connection with an attractive program on the griddle yesterday. Billy himself isn't aware of the fact up to now. Yes indeed, he can be found reading the American regularly every evening. Billy doesn't miss much going on anytime.
